35 hamsters saved from torture at HLS

NINE MILLION ANIMALS HAVE DIED INSIDE HLS IN THE LAST 50 YEARS.

GET ANGRY. GET ACTIVE. GET RESULTS

BACKGROUND

About HLS

Huntingdon Life Sciences (HLS) is a contract animal testing laboratory. They test weedkillers, pesticides, drugs and household products on animals to enable big businesses to get their products on the market quickly and cheaply. HLS has been exposed five times in the last ten years for animal cruelty and incompetence. We proved them to be breaking the law on many occasions, but the government still do nothing.

About SHAC

SHAC was set up at the end of 1999 by the same activists who set up campaigns to close down Consort beagle breeders and Hillgrove cat farm. The campaign has grown since then with a huge mailing list, hundreds of hits on the website every day and constant national publicity.

By targetting shareholders, stockbrokers and bankers, SHAC has caused a collapse in HLS's shares. Merrill Lynch, Charles Schwab, Winterflood Securities and Royal Bank of Scotland are among the institutions that have severed links with the firm. More recently, customers have been pulling out of HLS.

SHAC will never turn its back on the animals in HLS. This is why the animal rights movement has pulled together and is targetting HLS both locally and internationally - the animals have no one else but us. We will not fail them.

TRIBUTE TO VAL ARDIMENTO

It is with sadness and a great sense of loss that we pay tribute to Val Ardimento, who died on March 25 2002 after a long and courageous battle with cancer. Val came on many demos and who will ever forget her on The Force t.v. programme putting a jumped up copper in his place at a Hillgrove demo.

"Even if it could be guaranteed that vivisection will find a cure for cancer soon enough for it to benefit me, I would still say 'Don't Do It'. Just as my life is precious to me so is the life of all animals' precious to them. I don't like to feel pain and suffer and I don't want any animal to suffer and die in order to improve the quality or length of my life."

Val Ardimento 10 June 2001

Editorial

HLS have been in business fifty years this year. That means that over that period over nine million YES NINE MILLION animals have suffered and died there. The campaign has set an incredibly fast pace so far and this is set to get even more faster, harder hitting and ingenious.

This involves you, you are the campaign and it is up to everyone of us to make it work.

To be honest if you just get the newsletter, read it , put it down then do nothing to help either action wise or financially then please take yourself off the mailing list. This is not a game or a pastime, lives depend on us and they need us now, not tomorrow or the day after but NOW. Remember, we are not paid to run the campaign, we are ordinary people BUT we really need your help to make sure that those gates closing at Huntingdon is a reality and not just a dream. For all those who say its not possible, just you watch as we dismantle them piece by piece. We have forced HLS out of the country financially. We will always monitor this for any resurfacing and SHAC USA are doing a brilliant job of finishing them off financially in the US. I cannot think of another publicly owned company that is not trading on ANY stock exchange anywhere in the world, THAT'S THE CORNER WE HAVE FORCED THEM INTO. NOW is the next phase of the campaign as we enter into the end game : Time to dismantle their infrastructure in the UK, there are some parts that are not important but there are some parts eg. Pipex that HLS simply cannot operate without. Imagine a company with NO market makers, NO trading platform, NO website or email, NO insurance and still losing money at over £120,000 EVERY WEEK. That is a company that is dead in the water - Welcome to Huntingdon Life Sciences.

> This is not a game or a pastime, lives depend on us and they need us now

Please do not put this newsletter down and not act, THINK! 9 million beautiful animals have died in loneliness and pain. Organise yourself or your group for the coming months, look at the diary dates, look at the action boxes then act. If you don't act then who will? It really is now or never time to be part of history. GET ANGRY, GET ACTIVE AND GET RESULTS.

RAIDED!

WORLD DAY 2002

The locals were in shock – the tiny town of Diss had never seen anything like it, hundreds of enraged people taking to the streets and demanding an end to animal abuse.
People met in the town park and impassioned speeches were given by Dawn, Tom, Amanda and Kerry and as the last speaker finished the determined crowd set off.
With one sole aim in mind people set off carrying placards, waving banners, chanting "close down HLS" and making as much noise as possible.
Hundreds of leaflets were given out, stickers were plastered everywhere and nobody in the area could have missed the demo. The result? Hundreds more people are now aware of the filthy laboratory tucked away at Occold and countless people have been put off ever applying for employment there.
Job done, everyone sped off to the death camp itself and surrounded the place.
Before long, people were running across the fields with bolt croppers in hand determined to get inside to wreak havoc. People got into the fields and some began to take down the fence. The breathless coppers arrived and soon put an end to what was going on so off people went to visit the workers leaving a gaping hole behind them.
Noisy demos took place right outside the blood money houses of workers. Occold employees perhaps now realise that activists don't just stand outside their workplace – they take the message to their doorsteps and shame them before their whole community.
People also sped off to the lab at Huntingdon and to the vet in Eye who helps HLS export monkeys telling them what they think of animal abusers.

On World Day For Laboratory Animals activists visited one of Huntingdon's animal suppliers and trashed the place before making off into the night with animals which would have died at the hands of HLS. We received the following anonymous communique:

"On Saturday April 27th a number of us paid a visit to Wrights Breeding Centre on Rectory Lane, Latchingdon, Essex to let this vile establishment know that animal abusers do not get off lightly. Especially when they have dealings with HLS.
We got on site, grabbed a crowbar and began to rip the door off one of the stinking windowless units. After much wrenching it finally burst open. We were in and we were determined to cause as much damage as possible. And save as many lives as we could.
We found ourselves in a store room. Nothing to smash and no animals to save so we began to destroy another door. All was going well until the alarms went off - sirens blaring and lights coming on are not what you need in the middle of a raid! But as I say, we were determined and we were not leaving without animals in our hands. As others began to smash up the farm's vehicles we carried on and soon found ourselves in a room full of cages. There was no time to get a good look at these tiny animals and there was no time to take in the full horror of thousands of defenceless creatures boxed up waiting to die. We grabbed as many as we could and vanished into the night.
As we left some stopped to put in windows on the flashy house of the family who run the "business". Hearing the sound of their house being pounded with the damage it deserves made us feel all the better and all the more proud to be a part of the struggle for animal liberation.
Many of the 35 hamsters we saved were pregnant and went on to give birth. To look at these tiny creatures mothering their offspring and then to look at the perverts who work at HLS really hammers it home that these people are sick in the head and we will not stop them with anything other than the full force of our anger at animal abuse. We cannot change them, we can only destroy them.
Wrights breed animals for torture at HLS and for that they have had their first taste of retribution, we will be back again and, again to any company or individual who deals with HLS.
HLS SCUM you have been warned. We will grind you into the ground until HLS is no more.
We'll be seeing you. ALF."

A brilliant day of letting this less attended HLS location know that the campaign is on top of them and will not let go until they are beaten.

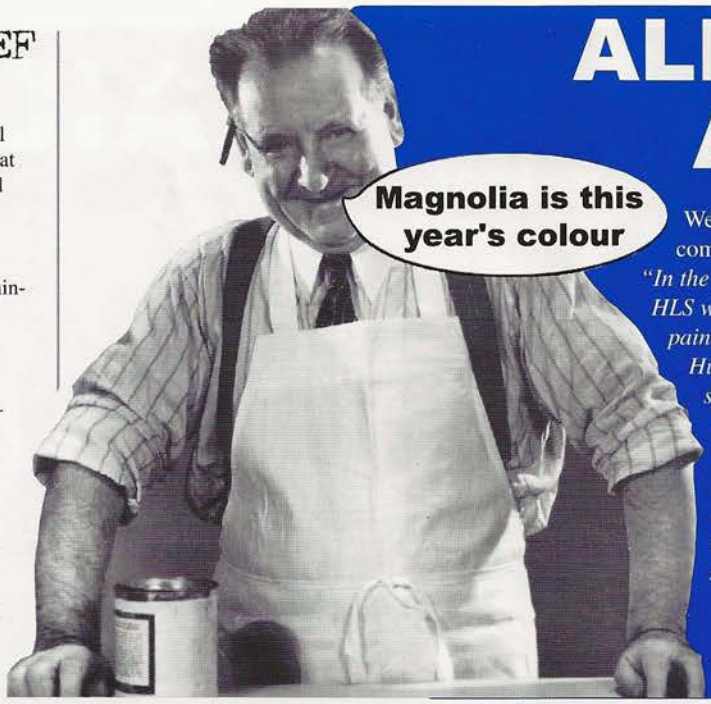

NEWS IN BRIEF

Sleaze

Figures released by the Electoral Commission this week reveal that HLS donated £1,500 to the local Conservative Association on January 11th.

Cass spotted

Campaigners demonstrating outside the Institute of Animal Technicians Conference in Edinburgh gave failing HLS director Brian Cass a piece of their minds when they saw him entering the event.
Cass was clearly not expecting to have to put up with the abuse he faces as part of his daily life all the way up in Scotland!

ALF PAINT ATTACK

We received the following anonymous communiqué from the ALF:

"In the early hours of Thursday morning HLS workers had their telephone numbers painted all over motorway bridges in the Huntingdon area. Slogans were also sprayed all over the roads and signposts leading up to the lab. We are in their face, we are on top of them, we are right, we won't let go and we are WINNING. It's the least we can do.

SHAC ATTACK

In early February they launched a four-pronged attack on the company.
Part A
Five activists made a dash for the doors of the JP Morgan building in Christchurch road, but the security were quick (for a change) and thrust a plank of wood through the door handles. The demo continued on the street for some time, until eight police officers arrived, along with the heavies from the other branch of JP Morgan.
Once it was clear that the police and security were out of the picture, a quick call was made to another team of activists and PART B of the plan unfolded.
Part B
They marched straight to a section of scaffolding that soared way up to the top of the building - and to the amazement of people working in the glass-fronted offices climbed to the top. Their banner was unfurled as security scuttled around below, looking like little more than ants.
The protestors stayed on the roof for quite a while before being escorted out of the building. When outside they held a noisy picket at the gates before moving on to part C.
Part C
Activists went back to the high street branch of JP Morgan in central Bournemouth and a lot of noise was made. Many leaflets were distributed.
The police were already there when we arrived so the demo was kept outside.
Part D
Before calling it a day, a few protestors decided it was time for PART D of the master plan. They went to the home of one of the directors of JP Morgan, knocking on his door, ringing the bell, using a megaphone and horns to tell all his neighbours that he kills puppies at HLS.

ACTION TIMELINE

05/03/02 HLS worker David Kirkpatrick has garden ornaments smashed up and his house stickered as 100 people descend on Cambridgeshire for a mobile day of action against HLS. A protester also breaks into Interfauna and gets on the roof.

ON THE MOVE

Over 100 protestors arrived in Huntingdon with one thing in mind - to sort animal abusers.

First stop was Parkers at Corby - they supply meat products for HLS' canteen. As soon as people got there they ran through the gates and into the warehouse shouting to the workers about their involvement with animal abuse. A helicopter hovered overhead and protestors who were late decided to have another run-in. They eventually managed to shut the gates so it was time to move on to no. 2 which was Interfauna, Sawtry Way, Huntingdon who supply beagles for HLS. As soon as everyone arrived they jumped out of their vehicles and ran down the lane which runs alongside the prison camp. As they ran along they could hear the puppies barking and howling which brought tears to demonstrators' eyes and made everyone feel extremely angry. As everyone looked at the fortress and thought about how impossible it seemed to climb over all the rolls of razor wire, they saw a black figure running over to the puppy unit. Protestors were overjoyed to see an activist standing on the roof of the kennels. It just shows that no matter how much security these places have got, activists will still gain access. The police constantly told people to "keep moving" and made several attempts to arrest activists trying to scale the fence. Activists went around the fence several times before moving on to no. 3. It was just around the corner: A.R. Cars, a taxi firm who have a contract to run HLS workers into 'work'. Activists who got here first left them in no doubt that they hadn't come to order a taxi. Police soon arrived screaming about Section 42. As they tried to get people to leave, yet more protestors arrived and got in the road outside the huge house. Residents were leaning out of their windows, one videoing, as protestors chanted "close down HLS". Everyone soon moved onto the home of an HLS worker: Activists arrived without police (5 different police forces and they still couldn't keep up!) A group of activists got up to the house and started banging on the windows and shouting through the letterbox. Soon after they had been there a neighbour started giving them the thumbs up and beckoning them to come over. She told them that she used to attend marches against HLS and supported the protests 100%. Another resident was directing people to the house. Apparently the house was covered in stickers and garden gnomes were smashed up which were around the back of the house. They soon moved onto the last two on the list which were two HLS workers. Activists got to both homes and screamed "animal abuser" through the letterbox. Both employees were standing in the bay window on their phones looking very shocked. Police started their usual bully boy tactics also employed by other police forces at other animal abusers in the past that are now no more. They failed then and they will fail now.

Even though the maps had no further targets on them, everyone moved on to a demo at Cass' house. Some people also moved on to HLS and just caught some workers coming out. They ran in front of the cars and got dragged off the road by police. Other activists were still touring the workers into the night.

Thirteen people were arrested and several official complaints were made against police officers. Even though many people had an extremely long and tiring day everyone seemed both motivated and determined to return to the next demo.

Ask yourself this question: Do you think the police prefer demos where they know where activists are going in advance and have their tactics nicely mapped out to stop the demos being effective OR demos where they haven't got a bloody clue where people are going to pop up from one moment to the next giving everyone free rein to be EFFECTIVE!

WHAT A STINKER

"Parkers Fine Foods were told what animal rights campaigners think of them on Wednesday when we stink-bombed the hell out of their Leicester offices. We're not sure how fine the food is now."

06/03/02 Marsh in Texas, USA have their locks glued up.

WHAT IF... IT WAS YOUR DOG?

Myself and a few other protestors arrived at Harlan Interfauna (one of HLS's beagle suppliers) ahead of the main demonstration. Going across the fields to the back of the building, so as to avoid unwanted police attention, we arrived at the perimeter fence.

The cries of the beagles were so powerful and distressing I immediately began to look for a way over the razor wire. Unfortunately at this point several police arrived and began to follow us around. I was able to wander away from the main body of people and was only followed by one copper, who by some divine intervention received a call on his radio and ran off around the corner. By this point I had had plenty of time to suss out a way over the fence and I didn't waste a second. I climbed up over the razor wire and I was in the compound.

My first instinct was to get on the nearest roof. This done however, I realised that the police/security were so slow and useless that I was the only person inside the compound - I had free rein to do as I wished. I jumped off the roof I was on and ran to where I could hear the beagles crying out. I clambered onto the beagle building, and looking down into a narrow passageway I could see the terrified animals jumping around with fright. As the full force of what I was seeing hit me, tears came to my eyes, and I was forced to sit for a moment, contemplating the excrement lining the concrete floors, with urine running out from under the bars of the cages.

The dogs had a shovel of sawdust scraped over the bottom of the cages, not even enough to soak up the urine that these poor animals were forced to live in. The smell was overpowering.

I turned around and was pleased to see that the main body of demonstrators had arrived, and it was a real inspiration to see so many people defending themselves against the violent cops, and trying to get into the compound with me. The atmosphere was electric. Thanks to everyone for their positive support.

I jumped down into the passageway where the beagles were kept in cages, at the front only protected from the elements by metal bars. It was clear to see how these animals were treated by their reaction to me. Most of the normally docile beagles ran to the back of their cages and hid, whining and sometimes shaking at the back of their cages underneath small wooden benches. A few ran up, but when I put my arm through the bars to reach them ran back petrified. The plight of these animals was so terrible that I had to repeatedly get back on to the roof to collect myself.

I was horrified when I saw that one of the beagles had bloody stumps in her gums where her teeth should have been. She was trying to bark at me, but this was obviously causing her a lot of pain.

There was one dog in particular who ran up to me and sniffed my hand through the bars. She seemed to sense it was safe and began to wag her tail. I reached through to pet her and make a fuss of her, and it was clear by her excitement that this was the only affection that she had ever been shown.

The thought that the animal that I had been playing with - who kissed me and who was so glad to be loved - will within months, weeks, be cut open on a sick scientist's table after many horrific experiments, is something, like so much else I saw that day, that will stay with me for ever.

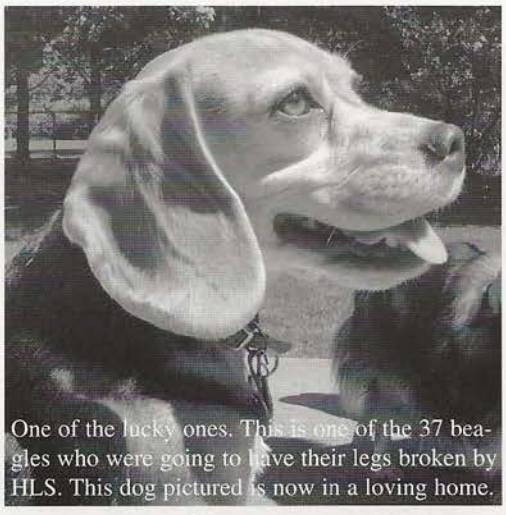

That is my reason for doing everything in my power to smash HLS once and for all.

After about an hour of being in this hell hole the police arrived and asked me to get down. Conceding that there was nothing else I could do for these miserable dogs, and that the demo had moved on, I went up to every single cage, with tears pouring from my eyes and apologised to every single dog for not bringing them the liberation that they so desperately need and deserve.

I made sure that the police had to see the animals when they escorted me from the premises, but they showed just what mindless bastards they are.

They arrested me, despite clearly seeing everything that I had just seen. What had driven me to tears was unimportant to them. I was charged with aggravated trespass, but after what I had seen, four hours in the cells and a probable few hundred pounds fine was like staying in a ten star hotel.

I have seen what is happening first hand. I now have so many fresh reasons to play my part in battering HLS into the ground, and that is exactly what I intend to do.

10/03/02 Activists dressed in suits arrive at Marsh in London and storm the building. In the scuffle windows break and the reception is showered with glass.

12/03/02 Three shareholders in Middlesex get their cars paintstrippered and their houses painted courtesy of the ALF.

GATECRASHING CONFERENCES

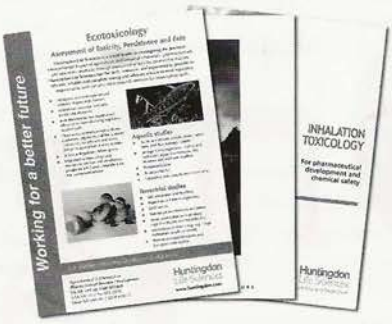

The campaign to close down Huntingdon Life Sciences has always prided itself on being creative and original. In the latest line of attack activists have been fighting HLS on their own territory . This has involved demonstrations outside and inside any conferences which HLS are attending. This plays a crucial role in the campaign because HLS rely on these conferences to attract new business. It is important that we isolate HLS away from the rest of the industry, when they stand on their own they are a much easier target for us to conquer.

SHAC IN JAPAN

In mid April SHAC campaigners from Britain joined up with around a dozen Japanese activists to target HLS at the CPHI sales fair in Japan. These events are designed to enable vivisectors to promote themselves and are thus of vital importance to HLS, Before the demo, 2 campaigners approached the pathetic HLS stall posing as potential investors. The HLS sales manager Alex Cummins was shocked that anyone would want to buy shares in HLS, he said that it wasn't possible to do so at the moment and with no market maker he had no idea when it would be possible. Oh dear.

Mr Cummins had lots of HLS literature. Some bragged about Studies in dogs and monkeys using mask or oropharyngeal tube dosing systems."

The next day the campaigners re-approached the stall and handed Mr Cummins some SHAC brochures to go with the HLS literature. He was shocked and refused to comment when told that HLS could not get a market maker because they are financially and morally bankrupt. The campaigners then distributed leaflets to hundreds of potential customers and exhibitors inside the conference.The demo definitely had a big impact - according to Japanese campaigners "Everyone in Japan is very nervous about SHAC."

Japan is a very important market for HLS. Our message is simple- WE WILL FIND YOU WHEREVER YOU ARE IN THE WORLD.HLS will be dismayed by the formation of SHAC Japan and with more demos planned for their sales offices in Tokyo this amounts to a major blow to Huntingdon's hopes for new business in the Far East.

OH LORD!

When we found out that HLS were involved in the BioWise 2002 conference at the London Metropole Hotel we decided it was time to book ourselves some tickets! Two smartly dressed activists arrived, flashed their passes and were led inside this supposedly high security conference.
For the first hour of the event the topic was animal rights campaigners and how to protect financial backers of HLS from demonstrators - you've done a cracking job so far boys!
As soon as Lord Sainsbury got up so did the two activists. They began to loudly inform the whole conference that HLS were a disgrace to the biotech industry and that the animal rights movement will not let go of the failing laboratory who lets not forget have a criminal record for breaking company law.
People were stunned as the duo wandered around the event handing out fact sheets before being removed from the building by security after a few moments of disruption.

THAT SINKING FEELING...

When we found out that Andrew Gay, marketing director of HLS, was due to rub shoulders with the directors of high profile organisations such as Boots, Asda, BT, Marks & Spencer and basically everybody who is anybody in the business world we decided it was time to bring them back down to earth and remind them that they are an insignificant little company who nobody has the time of day for.

HLS were to attend the Communication Directors Forum on the prestigious Aurora cruise liner and present a workshop entitled "Old McDonald Had A Crisis" and offer advice on how to deal with a corporate crisis. We got on the phone and by the time we were done Old McDonald must have been having a fit! The event organisers told HLS not to come and announced this on their web site.

14/03/02 Marsh in Exeter have all their windows smashed by a hammer wielding activist.

AGENTS OF DEATH

HLS have sales offices and sales reps all over the world. These people help promote the work of Huntingdon and rope in new customers.
HLS cannot recover financially without new customers so we need to make sure that these sales offices do not generate new businesses for the puppy killers.
Remember that the people listed below go out into the business world and conspire to slowly poison animals to death. They talk about in a cold, calculated manner how many monkeys you can slaughter per thousand pounds, how many puppies you can poison per test and how many rats you can have gassed in forced inhalation tests.

ACTION

Contact all of the sales offices and show them that no amount of distance will allow them to escape the pressure of the animal rights movement. Remember that these people talk about animals as if they were lifeless objects, already dead. PIPEX

HLS rely on their email and internet system as a way of pulling in new clients and as a means of internal communication. Imagine if Pipex could be persuaded to terminate their contract - a major part of their advertising would be gone, customers would not be able to get through and communications between different departments would become a nightmare leading to more time wasted, more sloppiness and more of a mess for the animal killers.
PIPEX are Huntingdon's Internet Service Provider (ISP) - they provide the service HLS need to have an internet system. Without PIPEX they would be in trouble. PIPEX are fully aware that HLS punch puppies in the face, that they push poison down the throats of rabbits and that they make guineapigs so sore that their skin cracks and bleeds yet they continue to supply HLS with this vital service.

ACTION

Phone PIPEX now, email them, write to them or visit them - it's time to net the HLS collaborators and put an end to animal torture.

LOCAL ACTION

SMASHING HLS County By County

Week in week out, up and down the UK people are out there hitting HLS and their collaborators where it hurts. Insurers, directors, suppliers and the lab themselves are facing continuous pressure to stop their abuse of animals.

There are HLS collaborators in every county and only when each and every one of them has had the spotlight thrown their way will Huntingdon close and stop slaughtering animals. By pulling together and working in local groups, the movement can really pile on the pressure for this hell hole to close. Here we take a look at SHAC Leicester who are out there several days a week ridding their area of HLS abusers.

They have even had the police banning the use of their noise-making equipment because Marsh could not handle the noise!

"HLS SCUM GET OUT OF OUR TOWN!"

When the campaign against Marsh was launched and after seeing that their area is riddled with companies and individuals that kill animals at HLS, campaigners in the East Midlands decided it was time to put a stop to it and SHAC Leicester was formed. Every week they demo various animal abusers be it suppliers, Marsh, shareholders or the workers at the gates of HLS. So far there have been several days of action as well as all-day pickets and home demos. One thing is for sure - whatever they are doing, wherever they are doing it, SHAC Leicester always make sure that HLS and their business partners get to hear about it as loudly as possible. They have even had the police banning the use of their noise-making equipment because Marsh could not handle the noise! Mind you, with sirens, whistles, airhorns and up to three megaphones on the go at once anybody would be hard pushed to put up with the din! Needless to say people soon got back on with the demos!

SHAC Leicster are a very informal group and anybody who hates cruelty and wants to stop it is made welcome. They have people of all ages involved in their group and there is something for everyone to do, be it going to demos, fundraising or leafleting.

Some of the demos have taken a rather 'interesting' turn. When you add up the arrest tally it comes up to a grand total of 43 arrests to date and SHAC Leicester are proud to be a part of a movement that is changing the world and making history. They can lock you in a room for a few hours but they cannot take away your voice and they cannot torture you to death, so onwards and upwards as the activists continue to keep up the pressure.

The main Leicester focuses so far have been Marsh and Parker Fine Foods (HLS meat supplier) both of whom have had to face demos inside their offices and on their doorsteps on a regular basis. Parker Fine Foods have collapsed and Leicester SHAC are just waiting for them to put it in writing that they have binned HLS forever before the demos stop. All it took was a couple of noise-making sessions, a couple of demos and a leaflet-laying session around the swimming pool of Mr Parker and HLS can kiss goodbye to one of their service providers.

One of the early Leicester days of action involved lively pickets at various shareholders' offices and resulted in every single person on the demo getting nicked by the time the day was done but it was well worth it and they were all back outside the same offices a few days later - they don't get rid of SHAC so fast! Not every demo is as well-attended or as fast and furious as the rest but all it takes to crack these animal killers is persistence, the desire to see that place closed and the urge to hold those animals in safety the day it happens.

Sometimes there are 15 people out, other times just 3. One thing is for sure, that is if everybody pulls together and steps up their campaigning on a local level, then the day that happens is pushed forward with every demo...

Yours for the animals,
The Leicester Crew

HAMMERING MARSH

NO ESCAPE FOR HLS'S INSURANCE BROKER

Since the last mailout, the campaign against HLS's insurance broker has gone international with an increasing volume of protests and pickets happening across the world. Everybody wants to play their part in persuading Marsh to sever their ties with HLS and Marsh will come to learn that we do not let go. The pressure will build until they dump HLS for ever.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Goodbye Marsh

Marsh received a nice slap in the face when sharp-eyed campaigners spotted in their local paper that they were to join Princess Anne at the opening event of a pharmaceutical factory in County Durham. A few phonecalls and suggestions of a demo later and the company Marsh were to help open decided that they were too much of a security risk and announced that Marsh would not be attending after all.

Bad news travels fast

When campaigners in the North East decided to demo their local Marsh office every day for a week news of this clamp-down on cruelty spread far and wide. Even Marsh employees in Exeter commented to protesters that they felt sorry for the Newcastle Office!

ON TOUR

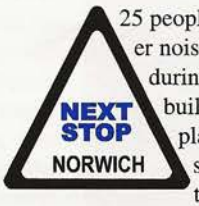

The Marsh Office Tour involved stormed buildings, home visits and plenty of noise. For five days in a row Marsh offices all over the place had it in the neck all day long.

Office number 1 was demo'd and invaded by 40 people. Protesters got up onto the roof, whilst others went running up the stairs to Marsh holding a noisy demo right outside their offices, stickering the corridors as they went before getting thrown outside for the demo. Half the demo moved on to the other Marsh office where security panicked and shut up shop. This meant that 100 or so employees were trapped inside reception for around half an hour while police showed up to escort them outside.

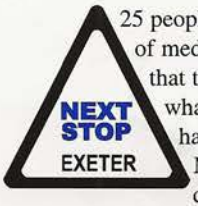

20 people turned up and complete with drums, sirens, airhorns and lots of other noise-making implements they rushed through the door to floor number 6 where Marsh are located. The internal doors were locked so people made a load of noise causing untold disruption. People moved on to the other Marsh office and occupied the entrance making sure that it was blocked off. The demo continued all afternoon.

25 people held another noisy demo during which the building was plastered with stickers and then followed on to hold a picket outside the home of the office manager.

Yet again various offices were targetted across the city and plenty of noise was made. Marsh were given the clear impression that if you abuse animals protesters come back time and time again to stop you.

25 people and loads of media ensured that this somewhat harangued Marsh office did not get off lightly. Loads of noise and loads of stickers added to the hassle they have had to face in recent weeks which has included loads of demos, broken windows, stinkbombs and even the environmental heath department being called in to shut down demos because of the noise!

16/04/02 Charles Schwab in the USA agree to stop trading in HLS shares and not to do so in future.

As the receptionist fled the room activists took it upon themselves to inform callers that Marsh abuse animals at HLS.

SHAC WORLDWIDE

Activists worldwide have been getting their teeth into Marsh, strengthening the global network of people determined to put an end to HLS now. People are getting organised and long gone are the days when HLS collaborators could expect an easy ride in the rest of the world. Here is a roundup of some recent actions in just a few of the countries who are hitting HLS where it hurts.

GERMANY

On the 8th of April SHAC Deutschland activists descended on Marsh offices in Dusseldorf, Frankfurt, Hamburg, Stuttgart, Munich, Wein (Austria) and Zurich (Switzerland).

Some offices had already received email, fax and phone blockades and the Berlin offices had been sprayed with slogans. On the 8th activists equipped with banners and leaflets held demos and run-ins leaving the message behind that HLS means bad publicity. SHAC Deutschland now have a web site at http://www.die-tierbefreier.de/shac/ and their first newsletter has just come out.

ITALY

Meanwhile in Italy the 1-6th of April was declared open season on Marsh. All 12 offices in the country were targetted. Seven of the offices had to face demonstrations outside which were attended by around 25 people, while in Rome 50 people arrived to express their anger at animal cruelty. All other offices were phone, fax and email blockaded. This was the first coordinated week of action against HLS in Italy and what a week it was! Activists in Italy have said "The protests and blockades go on and will never stop unless Marsh drop HLS."

NEW ZEALAND

Activists targetted Marsh offices in Dunedin and Wellington as part of Lab Animal Week. In Dunedin 10 people entered the offices and occupied the reception, plastering stickers all over the place. The receptionist fled, so they took it upon themselves to answer the phones for Marsh and tell their clients a few home truths until the police arrived and put a stop to the demo. The demo then went on to a local Shell garage to protest against their custom of HLS. In Wellington demoers entered the Marsh building via lifts and as paranoid Marsh had locked all of the internal doors, they wandered around stickering the premises before going down to reception and setting up the demo there. The megaphone was cranked up and employees from neighbouring offices came to see what was going on. Once made to leave, they continued outside and carried on the demo there.

NEWS FROM SHAC USA

SHAC-USA, in one week, found and 'convinced' the remote mountain-based company to drop service to Huntingdon. With the help of some anonymous activists, quick work was made of Spencer Edwards. The president received a surprise IN-HOUSE home demonstration on Easter Sunday, another executive had his laundry stolen, and their offices were left in a state of disarray after an impromptu demonstration. No other market maker has given HLS a second look since.

Editorial:
To call SHAC-USA productive over the last two months would be a gross understatement. HLS got a nice big slap in face with campaigners across America achieving victory after victory in this epic fight to close them down. With HLS never anticipating the next target or their own vulnerabilities, US activists left them and their cohorts scrambling for refuge. Undeterred by lawsuits and police brutality, we are well underway to what promises to be the most exciting, dynamic, and forceful part of the campaign.

Financially F#@'d
HLS's Achilles heel, its inability to manage its books, was again exploited in the US. Attempting to salvage the US re-listing, HLS found itself a market maker (Spencer Edwards) to finally get its ticker symbol up and trading. Not having any of that ,

Activists in Boston and San Francisco turned the heat up on State Street, a major HLS investor. 3AM wake calls with megaphones outside the president's house, constant phone calls and office disruptions made quick work of yet another company to sell HLS down the river.

Always keeping long-term strategy in mind, SHAC-USA activists secured a major blow against HLS by convincing Charles Schwab, the world's biggest online broker, to no longer trade in HLS shares, killing any future volume or fluidity in shares. No money, no prospects, no future for you HLS!

Sabbing the Suppliers
Attacking the infrastructure of HLS and driving up the operating costs has never seemed so easy. With a couple of quick demonstrations, phone calls and meetings, HLS's janitorial services, food service provider, and employee healthcare provider all gave this vile lab the boot.
Marsh just as in the UK and Europe, has become the object of much scorn. Countless demonstrations, phone calls, emails and home visits have sent a clear message that insuring animal cruelty is not acceptable. Marsh, in its infinite lack of wisdom, is now attempting to sue US activists across the country. This did not work for Stephens, BNY or HLS and it will not work for you Marsh - it only strengthens our resolve and fortifies our anger.

Not 'Business as Usual'
Attempting to peddle their crap services at the annual Toxicology Conference in Nashville, Tennessee, HLS and conference attendants were met with a rude surprise when activists cleared their tables, threw about anti-HLS leaflets – and left the event ringing with an extremely loud noise bomb. Sorry to have crashed your party…
And from the good people of the "Provisional HLS Campaign Internet Division" : Three abandoned computers were found, equipped with some pirated software and programmed to ring HLS and all its extensions. After going for four days undetected, the computer logs showed that 34,640 calls were made to HLS!

WORLD DAY UPDATE
From Coast to Coast, North to South, activists spent the third week of April smashing HLS in four large regional demonstrations in San Francisco, Texas, Chicago and New York City. Marsh offices were protested at and the roof of E*Trade was taken over, anti-vivisection speakers spoke to thousands, and home demonstrations were brought to the abusers' door steps (and through the front windows of NYC Marsh employees!). Companies that collaborate with HLS were left with little doubt that things are only getting faster and more furious in the US campaign until the doors of HLS slam shut forever.

26/04/02 50 activists on a coach in the USA tour the offices of HLS . Armed with confetti, silly string, stickers, stinkbombs and sacks of popcorn they leave a trail of broken computers, messed up offices and unhappy directors.

27/04/02 Fencing torn down at HLS Occold as hundreds of people gather to mark World Day for Lab Animals. Hamsters liberated and damage caused at Wrights Breeding Centre who supply HLS.

THEY SAY MONEY TALKS...

For anyone who ever doubted SHAC could take on the financial system behind HLS, it is time to eat your words. Huntingdon Life Sciences is now in an unprecedented situation for a public company and despite the spin, their recently released annual report shows that the decline in their business continues unabated. Frankly, we are winning. The last few months have been some of the most unusual in financial history for both sides of the Atlantic.

HLS, in its new guise of Life Sciences Research Inc (LSR), has become no better than a private company, despite its numerous shareholders. The triumph of the US campaigners in scaring off the market maker Spencer Edwards, was a fundamental blow to HLS in their efforts to relist their shares out of Britain. They are now in a strange limbo, struggling to find someone else to take them on, which is very unlikely to happen.

The beautiful part is that just before HLS anticipated having a new market for their shares, they were restructuring their finances in an effort to improve their debt problem. This involved issuing over 9 million new shares in LSR (reducing the stake of existing shareholders by half) in exchange for debt, in an effort to reduce their interest repayments. The new shareholders would have been expecting to make their money back on the new market which was supposed to develop in LSR shares in the US, away from UK animal rights activists.

In the light of SHAC USA's achievements, they have lost badly and will be furious with HLS management for not delivering on their promises over the LSR deal. In other words, SHAC is scuppering the deal.

To clear up some confusion, LSR shares are not officially listed on the "Pink Sheets", and the "Other OTC" which the company says they are listed on is not a stock market. It is possible to trade shares, but it is exceptionally difficult, especially for small UK-based shareholders. It has become even harder with the world's biggest stock broker, Charles Schwab, refusing to hold these shares on behalf of their clients.

HLS financials are also a joy to read. In their 2001 financial report they claim last year's orders increased by 3.38% and are proud of this figure. The truth is, that though doing slightly better than 2000, they are doing worse than 1999. This is not a company in recovery - the increase hardly exceeds inflation. They fail to highlight that expenses associated with these revenues grew at a much faster rate of 5.17%, resulting in the largest operating loss since 1998 of $3,546,000.

Operating costs are the costs associated with the day to day running of the business. However, the overall net loss, with all expenses taken into account, is a massive $8,446,000 - 21.8% higher than 1999. Total debt increased from $50 million in 2000 to a massive $88,123,000 in 2001, an increase of over 75%. For the first time the company is in the unhealthy position of where what it owes exceeds assets.

Buried in the results is a potential $14,364,000 in deferred income taxes which ,combined with their disclosed operating loss, would make a total loss for the 2001 of $22,810,000 which is equal to £1,329,254 a month!

In order for HLS to break even, they need to increase business by a huge 22%, and that is if they can achieve the impossible task of keeping every other cost static. Not even their competitors come anywhere near that.

There is no recovery as claimed. A few customers may have come back, but in nowhere near the numbers needed to keep HLS alive in the long run. Though management are racing to restructure their debt to ease the burden, it is not going to be enough to save them. As long as activists keep the pressure on, they are never going to reach profitability again. They have tried everything to stop it, but the campaign has defeated them, their situation is not sustainable and the money is starting to run out.

...TIME TO SHAKE THE MONEY MEN

HELP US TO HELP THEM

SHAC is run by volunteers who give up their lives in order to completely focus on closing down HLS. Without your help we couldn't continue the campaign against the hellhole. Your support has brought about countless victories so far, such as the Natwest campaign and the shareprice down. Your money pays for stationery, postage costs, equipment, petrol costs, stunts such as banner drops and much more. All we ask is that you commit to donating a certain amount to us each month whether it is £1 or £100. I know many of you out there feel helpless because you are unable to actively take part in the fight against HLS but there are many other ways you can help the animals at HLS, fundraising being one of them. There are so many ways that you can raise money: street stalls, car boot sales, benefit CDs/gigs, sponsored walks. Use your imagination!

We look forward to hearing from you...
