NYSE TRADE BLOOD MONEY SHARES IN HUNTINGDON LIFE SCIENCES

THE SHAC FINANCIAL CAMPAIGN SO FAR

Many of the most important parts of the SHAC campaign have been the financial ones. In turn in many instances it has been this part of the campaign that has done Huntingdon the most damage.

The first blow was struck in early January 2000, when the Sunday Telegraph ran a front page story that the Labour Party pension fund had shares in HLS. Within days of this they sold all their shares. On the list we had been leaked were lots of other companies like Camden Council Pension Fund and Rover Cars Pension Fund to name just two. We started to hold demos all over the country outside these companies.

In early March 2000, the holding company of the shares, Phil Drew Nominees, put 31 million HLS shares on the London Stock Exchange for just 1p and Huntingdon's share price went into freefall. Throughout 2000 shareholders left in droves, keeping the share price at just a few pennies. Some of these shareholders who dropped HLS were HSBC (the world's second largest bank), CitiGroup (the world's largest financial institution), UBS (the world's largest private bank) and many more.

The Natwest bank were also a target as they had loaned HLS £12 million in 1998 when they were taken over by Andrew Baker and Brian Cass. In August 2000, the Natwest bank were taken over by the Royal Bank of Scotland so the demos started to include them as well. The RBS clearly wanted out, and in early December they gave HLS an ultimatum to either find a new lender within a few weeks or they would foreclose on the loan.

In Dec 2000, The NYSE kicked HLS off the New York Stock Exchange because their share price was too low.

On Jan 20th 2001, with hours to go, the UK government brokered a deal with the american Stephens Bank to take on the loan from the RBS who wrote off a 12 million pound loan in their desperation to get away from HLS.

In March 2001, we targetted Huntingdon's two Market Makers, Winterflood and Dresdner Wasserstein. After an intense 10 days of demos, Winterflood pulled out and the next day Wasserstein went as well. The London Stock Exchange rules state that to be on the exchange you need at least one market maker, and so HLS were kicked off the LSE .

Later in 2001 the RBS also closed Huntingdon's bank account and the British government were forced to step in as Huntingdon's banker.

A few months later an article appeared in the FT saying that the British Bankers Association were close to securing HLS a high street bank account so we contacted them all. Within 5 hours Barclays bank, Lloyds TSB, HSBC and RBS/Natwest all contacted us saying they would never give Huntingdon a bank account.

In late 2001, Huntingdon ceased to become a British company as they were forced to domicile themselves in the US because of the financial devastation caused in the U.K.

In Jan 2002, Stephens backed out of their 5 year loan agreement stating: "We knew about the activists but we didn't realise the lengths they would go to."

In Dec 2002, Huntingdon's insurance company Marsh (the world's largest insurance broker) pulled out and with no company willing to step in, the British Government now became Huntingdon's insurance company.

In Feb 2003, Huntingdon's auditor Deloitte & Touche dropped them and HLS have never been able to find another UK auditor, so in 4 years HLS still haven't filed accounts at Companies House in the U.K.

In Sept 2005, HLS were denied a prestigious listing on the NYSE with just 45 minutes to go, causing them worldwide embarrassment.

In 2006, Huntingdon's only US Market Maker Legacy Trading dropped HLS, causing them to drop from the Over the Counter Bulletin Board (OTCBB) to the Pink Sheets.

Throughout 2006, there was further pressure added to Huntingdon's Market Makers on the Pink Sheets who all dropped HLS, seeing them fall to the lowest point, the Grey Markets.

Also in 2006 we were leaked the details of Huntingdon's US auditor who had been allowed up to that point by the US Government to give a false name and their details were uncovered.

So what next? The article on your left and the following pages show just where we are and where we are going with the financial part of the campaign to close HLS.

2007: The year to sort out Huntingdon's financials once and for all

On Dec 22nd 2006, the New York Stock Exchange tried to quietly slip HLS on to the newly formed NYSE Arca exchange. The NYSE had just merged with Archipelago and created a new exchange under the main trading floor that was completely electronic and supposedly anonymous.

The NYSE had come under intense pressure since the Sept 2005 postponement from Huntingdon's customers and the US and UK Governments. HLS and their shareholders were also threatening legal action. In Sept 2005 there had been a huge fanfare coming up to their ill fated listing. On Dec 22nd 2006 it couldn't have been more different. The only press release was sent out at 4am on the morning of trading which by no coincidence was the Friday before Christmas Day.

I can see Huntingdon's glee: "We've got them this time as we are on a wholly anonymous exchange so no more trouble with market makers as we don't need them."

What the fools at Huntingdon and the NYSE did not see was the big picture. This is a much bigger fight than market makers who could just rotate if they wanted to. As one drops out another comes on and so forth, leaving us chasing our tails. No, the battle is with the NYSE itself.

Again what they did not see was the fact that a few days earlier all the shareholders of Euronext and the NYSE had agreed to a merger of equals. Euronext is the combined exchanges of Amsterdam, Brussels and Paris. The NYSE are as we speak striving to become the world's first truly global exchange and in early 2007 have agreed friendly terms of trading with the Tokyo Stock Exchange. In 2007 the NYSE are looking for a merger with the major exchange in China.

The merger with Euronext for the first time ever gives us the same financial target that US activists can hit and so can we here in the UK and across Europe. By the time you read this the merger of the NYSE and Euronext will be almost complete. They have cynically chosen to list Huntingdon knowing full well just what goes on inside the horror labs at Huntingdon.

This will not be an easy fight but it is one we must win. You have got to ask yourself if the NYSE humiliated them in Sept 2005, why would Huntingdon want to list their shares on there at all? The simple answer is that they have to for their very survival. All listed companies want to list on the NYSE, just like all football teams want to be in the Premiership, because it means prestige and more importantly it means money for HLS as it shows that they have financial stability.

This cannot and will not be allowed to happen. HLS are in the last chance saloon here as if they get kicked off the NYSE then they are in the financial wilderness forever. Brian Cass and Andrew Baker are not scientists, they are both trained accountants, and they are both fast approaching 60. They bought Huntingdon to be the new Covance and if HLS are kicked off the NYSE they will have spent the last 10 years for nothing and all their plans will be in ruins.

We will not back down from this fight no matter how long it takes. As I said earlier this will be no quick victory but win we will and win we must.

Over the page you will find the details of companies split into 2 categories. The first is the NYSE Euronext and their shareholders. NYSE Euronext have blood on their hands pure and simple. Their shareholders are not in the same category as the NYSE but as shareholders they own the NYSE Euronext so have a hell of a lot of influence on the decisions of the NYSE Euronext. Please contact them and urge them to use this influence.

The second category is NYSE members. To be a member of the NYSE you have to give at least $1 million and this allows you to trade on the trading floor (pictured right). Again, if enough members agitate, then this makes for a very unhappy exchange so please contact them and ask them to put pressure on the NYSE Euronext.

Also the final ones in this category are the NYSE specialists. There are only 7 of them across the world and they are specialist NYSE brokers so again they have a lot of influence. Please contact them.

If HLS are kicked off the NYSE they are in serious, serious trouble and they know it. They thought they were being smart but this could turn out to be their downfall and that is no understatement. No HLS means no 500 animals dead on their cage floors every day. Don't forget that.

We will not fail them.

THE CAMPAIGN IN 5 MINUTES

Huntingdon Life Sciences are Europe's largest animal testing lab. HLS kill, maim and mutilate 500 animals every single day. Huntingdon are the most exposed animal testing lab in the world, with 6 undercover investigations spanning from 1989 to 2006.

It is legal in a UK laboratory to burn, electrocute, starve, shoot and poison animals. Your MP & the RSPCA have no right of access to any UK lab and section 24 of the Animal Scientific Procedures Act 1986 states that if anyone publicises what they have seen inside any UK lab they can be imprisoned for up to 2 years.

Stop Huntingdon Animal Cruelty was formed in 1999 to close Huntingdon Life Sciences with the focus on Huntingdon's finances. Because of the successes SHAC have had against Huntingdon's financial backers, HLS at present do not have a banker or an insurance company. The UK government with taxpayers' money acts as both.

Huntingdon are $91 million in debt and many global companies have dropped HLS including HSBC (the world's second largest bank), Lloyds TSB, Barclays, Royal Bank of Scotland/Natwest, UBS (the world's largest private bank), Marsh (the world's largest insurance broker) and Citigroup (the world's largest financial institution) to name just a few of the many hundreds of companies who have severed links with Huntingdon.

The targets in this newsletter are in 3 categories. The first is the NYSE Euronext who have recently begun trading Huntingdon's shares. The second is Huntingdon's customers who contract experiments at Huntingdon. The third is companies who supply Huntingdon with goods and services.

The best way of keeping up to date with all the demos against Huntingdon is on our website www.shac.net. In the first 6 weeks of 2007, there has been over 50 demos so far against HLS worldwide. Full lists of Huntingdon's customers & suppliers are also on the website as are all the details and video footage from the 6 exposes mentioned at the top.

So want to help the animals? Then help SHAC.

HEY DON'T FORGET OUR ADDRESS HAS CHANGED TO: STOP HUNTINGDON ANIMAL CRUELTY C/O FRIEND, 89 BUSH ROAD, EAST PECKHAM, TONBRIDGE, KENT TN12 5LJ.

A CLOSER LOOK AT 12 COMPANIES

The companies listed here are each and every one vital to HLS's existence. The customers listed are giving HLS significant amounts of work and the courier companies are their key ones. Contact them all politely and ask them how they can justify dealing with HLS.

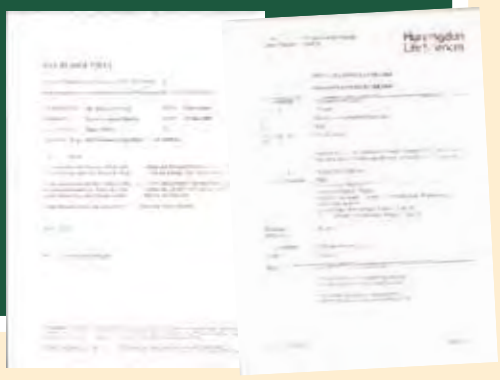

Spotlight on Novartis

Novartis are a big target for the campaign in 2007. They have a long and sordid history of using Huntingdon. This is the same Novartis who between 1995 - 2000 carried out xenotransplantation experiments at HLS where many hundreds of wild caught baboons from Africa died on the operating table. In addition many hundreds of cynomolgus monkeys and genetically modified piglets also died in these disgusting experiments.

This is the same Novartis who ordered beagles to die inside HLS for a flea collar experiment (fax at bottom). Many thousands of animals have died inside HLS because of Novartis who should look across to Basel, Switzerland and ask themselves why all demos worldwide against their neighbour Roche have stopped. Simple, they stopped using HLS. Now it's your turn Novartis.

The photos of the beagles on the right were taken inside HLS. The ones on the left are of a dog rescued by brave activists. Look at the difference in the expressions on their faces. If these pictures don't spur you on to fight harder and stronger than you have ever done then nothing will.

HLS slowly poisoned and killed the beagles on the right. Human beings planned to systematically destroy the saved beagle and cause him pain that we could never imagine. To see him looking so contented and serene on the beach brings me to tears of joy for him and sadness for all those we've not saved. Take a good look at these pictures and let them drive you to bring an end to this sadistic barbarity.

Freedom for all of the animals inside HLS is within our reach. It is up to all of us to secure that freedom. We will not let them down. Remember when you are demonstrating at NYSE Euronext you may feel far removed from these dogs but you are at the heart of the battle and accelerating the process of closing HLS for good.

Cut out these photos and put them where you can see them every day. Look them in the eye at night knowing you did all you could to see the dogs on the right become the dog on the left.

EVEN THE COPS LOVE SHAC IN HOLLAND

PARANOID AT PERKINELMER

This is one of many demos that have happened in the U.K. in the last few months. You always need to remember that the pictures you are looking at are only a fraction of all the demos that happen. We cannot print them all.

The strip of photos below was taken at Perkinelmer at their UK HQ in Bucks. We arrived at 4-45pm to greet the workers out. The first workers should have been leaving then but the first ones left at 6-15pm in convoys and every single one had their number plates covered up as pictured. About 100 cars went past us like this. Paranoid or what?

HLS PRIMATE SUPPLIER EXPOSED

The BUAV (British Union against Vivisection) recently exposed the Nafovanny primate farm in Vietnam. They filmed inside the farm showing the usual appalling conditions and the fact that they were using wild caught primates (like they all do).

It turned out that quite a few of the primates there were destined for Huntingdon which is a surprise as they were almost exclusively obtaining primates from Mauritius during the past few years.

The primates from Vietnam were flown into Charles de Gaulle airport in Paris (because no airline will fly primates directly into the UK) where they were custom cleared and then brought over in vans via Dover.

You can see the footage shot inside Nafovanny plus photos and the report of what they found at www.buav.org

As always the UK Home Office look the other way and do nothing.

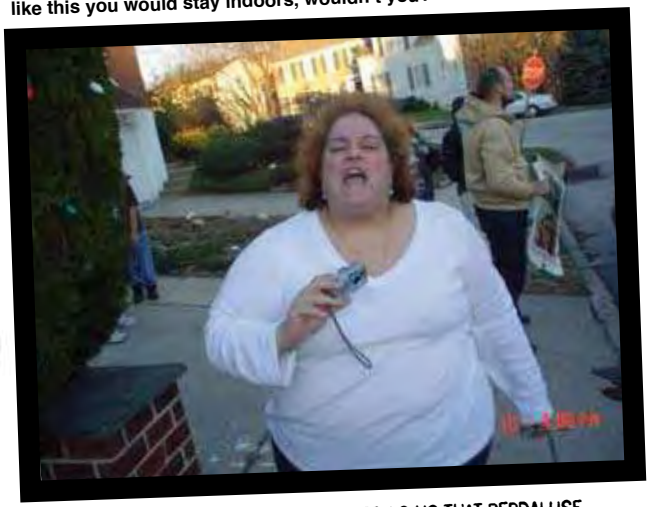

SAVAGE BEAST ESCAPES FROM MERCK LAB

STOP PRESS:NEWS JUST REACHING US TELLS US THAT PERDALUSE WAS RUSHING OUT WITH HER CAMERA TO TAKE A PICTURE OF YER MAN KEITH (ALSO KNOWN AS 'HOT KEITH' IN THE TRADE)

MY SHOUT: KEITH MANN

If you don't remember the Animals Film then you never saw it. It was one of my first experiences of the unspeakable world of the animal abuser and it disturbed me so much that I vowed then that nothing would stop me stopping them doing terrible things to animals. Sure, the seven years they locked me up for slowed me down a little but it didn't stop me! Three torturous hours of indescribable horrors is The Animals Film and few will sit through it, least of all those who decry what we do in our efforts to stem the extremists' use of violence. One scene lives with me, that of a cousin of mine with pained eyes and a contraption screwed to his skull. No good explanation was forthcoming from whoever did this terrible thing to that animal and none would help. It is a despicable thing to do and there is no justification.

My life changed the moment I looked into that youngster's eyes. That was in 1982 and thanks to Channel 4. You'd think, 25 years on, such savagery would have been long since outlawed. In fact things have got worse, not for the individuals being experimented on, for them suffering is suffering whatever country they are in and whatever lab, but today such footage and images are not only hidden from the TV screens but every effort is being made to remove such scenes from the High St. Today, overworked, understaffed police teams patrol the streets looking for leaflets and posters to confiscate from stalls and even threaten protestors for carrying placards depicting 'offensive' material, i.e. the animals they encourage others to abuse. Even outside the gates of the labs where the animals are dying it is scorned upon by police to show the images to the perpetrators!

In 1882 it could be argued there was some need to test things on animals to prove it doesn't work. It's not an argument I would ever use nor do I agree it's right to abuse others for personal gain but it's understandable why some people would agree with the need to see whether humanity could be saved with the help of a few rodents. Today people are still happy to test this theory - stupid, selfish, ignorant people in my view – but their argument has long since fallen foul of the facts. We have never been in a better position to prove the terrible failings of vivisection and prove it we must. I don't believe the human animal is necessarily a cruel one but there are those who will defend their right to do with other animals as they wish. Only as long as the rest of society believes they are benefiting from vivisection will they support it. Once that façade has been broken down the vivisection empire will crumble. The official line is a big fat lie. The truth would of course change things.

One way of addressing this has become a project of mine. Behind The Mask is probably the best film ever made on the subject. Unlike The Animals Film and so many others of the sort this is truly watchable, gripping in fact! I've heard it said so many times, Behind The Mask is changing lives. Like the campaign raging against HLS its time has come; it's professional, compelling and successful and there's nothing they can do to stop it! HLS is a gross contradiction of everything decent, honest, sensible and civilised and it will be no more. They know it and we know it. The only question is when and for every individual heading there this is hugely significant. Significantly the responsibility for this lies with each and every one of us and one way of getting this message across is through this eye-opening movie. Watch the film and then have a read through this newsletter again. See if you can still put off until later the urgent actions highlighted.

The time to act is now.

In January italian activists carried out a 7 day tour of Italy against Huntingdon customers & suppliers. The activists also visited many shops selling fur along the way.

The activists concentrated heavily on Novartis and Sanofi Aventis who are both big HLS customers. The tour was a huge success with activists ranging from 20-50 on any of the days.

Novartis have some very important sites in Italy and all global groups are really hitting all the right targets at the same time.

The activists spent the last 2 days of the tour holding demos outside prisons where prisoners of conscience are being held. As always what you read and see here is just a fraction of the demos in Italy against Huntingdon.

SHAC recently held a 5 day tour of Holland. We were meant to go to Switzerland and Paris also but apparently due to a series of home demos against HLS customers Novartis in Switzerland and Sanofi Aventis in Paris (right under the Eiffel Tower apparently) both Governments intervened and banned all the demos. I say, how ghastly!

So we had a little cry about the oppression and went home, right? WRONG! We are SHAC so we thought on our feet and organised at very short notice a 5 day tour of Holland hitting all the main customers and suppliers.

Shake 'em up! and Shake 'em down! we did with the help of a 10 million candle power lamp that sought out those who thought they could hide.

The highlights were many including a Novartis security guard arrested for throwing bricks off the roof at us (making us even more angry... at him? No, at Novartis.) to many meet and greet the workers and having our photos taken with lots of friendly Dutch cops (UK cops have lots to learn).

Don't worry folks we'll be back and especially to see the murderers at Novartis.

Brits abroad - shout loud and keep on shouting. The Italian Job or Me old Dutch: who wins? We are all friends against the common enemy HLS. So we win and they lose - as usual.

Dr. Joe Harris

My name is Dr. Joseph Harris and I'm currently serving a prison sentence for my involvement in three economic sabotage attacks against companies supplying services to Huntingdon Life Sciences. As reported in the papers, the damage included slashed tyres, extensive spray-painting, super-glue put in locks, air conditioning systems destroyed, and in one instance a building was flooded with a hose pipe through a letterbox, causing part of the ceiling to collapse. I was caught and arrested after triggering a motion-sensor activated CCTV camera. Vaulting an eight foot spiked fence, I was then chased by 10 carloads of police who got the better of me and I was brought to the ground under a volley of truncheon blows.

I've always found it hard vocalising my feelings regarding vivisection, but hopefully my actions will speak louder than any words. Up until my arrest I worked in a laboratory trying to develop a cure for gastrointestinal cancers using humane research. I believe in medical advancement and have presented my work at a number of international conferences and had papers published in peer reviewed journals. My actions also came in the form of £20,000 of damage I helped cause to companies involved in supporting animal experiments carried out by HLS. Experiments I view as wrong on every level. I feel embarrassed when fellow scientists say that the testing of household products, agrochemicals, food colourings, artificial sweeteners etc. on animals can be justified in the name of progress.

I hold a PHD in pre-clinical oncology and although I've not carried out animal testing myself, I have worked alongside those who have. Because of this I have experienced first hand the inherent flaws of using animals as models of human disease and have also experienced the pressure there is on scientists to get involved with vivisection. I got to the point where, despite my important position, I was not prepared to sit back whilst I knew that two floors above me animals were being needlessly sacrificed on the altar of human greed and curiosity (whilst I have been in prison I have heard the news that a box of rats destined for this lab have been liberated en route!). Because of this in December 2005 I carried out my first attack against what I viewed as a strategic target in the vivisection industry, and two further attacks took place in January 2006.

It's now January 2007 and I've already spent a few months in prison. Time is passing quickly and as with all things I'm just keeping my head down, no whining, no moaning, just getting on with it. I've gained the respect of other prisoners for what I did and for standing by my drug-free, vegan principles and have made a lot of friends on my wing. I'm in the gym five times a week, I go to pottery and painting classes, am learning Spanish, am doing a course training me up to be a mentor in maths and english lessons and am planning the best way of making use of my scientific skills when I am released.

A big thank you to everyone who's written to me. In prison it's important to have something to look forward to every day and receiving letters is one of those things. Stand strong, stand proud and do not let the fire of compassion that burns in your heart be quenched.

Hold your heads up high,

Dr Joe

Natasha Avery

Hi everyone,

Well here I am back out and free again after a most enjoyable stay at Bronzefield holiday camp errr prison. I'm now a qualified gym instructor and fit as hell- cheers HMP. Thank you so much to everybody who wrote to me - the support was just unbelievable, especially at Christmas when I got a big stack of cards every day. The amount of support you get as an animal rights prisoner really marks you apart from everybody else, and generates a lot of interest and many discussions about animal cruelty. I heard from some of the SHAC USA prisoners who have just gone to jail in the States and they received amounts of mail they were completely amazed by - Darius said the amount of post he got was 'awesome!'. Mail really is the highlight of the day when you are in jail, so never underestimate what a difference you can make to those who have put their liberty on the line with just a few words on a card.

Being away from the campaign for a few months really gave me the opportunity to think about what has been achieved since the start of the campaign against HLS. It really is staggering when you think of the roll call of companies that have stopped doing business with them, from banks to insurance companies, auditors to market makers, security firms to suppliers, customers to some of the world's biggest financial institutions. The SHAC campaign has always been, and continues to be, intelligent, innovative, ground-breaking and daring, a trial ground for new tactics and a training ground for activists worldwide. In 2006 18 different countries across the globe united to fight HLS and those that do business with them. As HLS's MD Brian Cass stated, 'the number of activists isn't enormous but their impact has been incredible.'

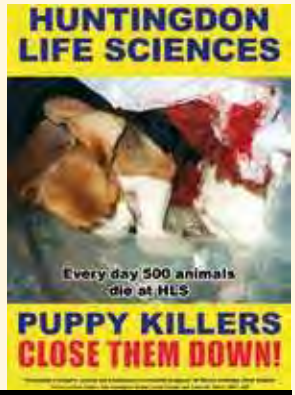

Not surprisingly, global financial institutions and multinational companies have not taken kindly to having their links to and involvement in animal cruelty exposed to their clients and the world's media, and have leant heavily on governments, which has resulted in many extraordinary (and extraordinarily ineffective) steps being taken to attempt to stifle the global animal rights movement. No-one should be surprised by this, but instead welcome it as a sure sign that our tactics and strategy are spot on and having an impact.

What I know for certain is that the harder they fight to stop us, the harder we must fight to close down Huntingdon. Now is the test of our mettle, individually and as a movement, and this applies not only to HLS but to every campaign and every victory we set out to achieve for the animals. There is nothing to fear and everything to fight for. We need to push ourselves, to get out on the demos, to play an active role and to show HLS and all those who support them what we are made of. They need to understand that there will be no let up until those gates close, and that for every attempt they make to stop us, for every one of us they imprison, the comeback will be on HLS.

We have the power and we have the capability, so let's get on with it. For all the animals HLS have killed and will continue to kill until we finish them off, for our comrades who have given their freedom to turn the dream of HLS closing into reality, let's get on with it and get the job done.

For animal liberation,
Natasha x

Disclaimer

This newsletter is not intended to encourage illegal activity of any kind. SHAC's intent is to close down HLS by legitimate means only, spreading information and disseminating the facts relating to HLS's record of animal cruelty, fraud and incompetence. We believe that there is more than enough evidence for the UK government to withdraw HLS's licence and close them down.

Readers must bear in mind that certain demonstrations eg home demonstrations and office occupations are now illegal in the UK although they are perfectly legal in other countries, and the inclusion of reports relating to these demos abroad does in no sense amount to encouragement to do similar demos in the UK.

Company details are listed for the purposes of readers making informative and polite communications with the companies listed. The details are not intended for repetitive, rude or threatening calls.

SHAC is a global organisation and so the laws differ from country to country. Sections 145 &146 in the UK make it a specific offence to target a company involved with the vivisection industry with a view to getting them to sever a contract by illegal means.

So does this mean that demonstrations, phone calls and emails are now illegal? No it doesn't, but what it does mean is that to target a company illegally is. So what does illegally mean? Well to ring a company up or send them an email saying that they shouldn't be dealing with HLS because of Huntingdon's appalling record of animal cruelty is perfectly legal. But on the other hand to ring a company up and say they should stop dealing with HLS or else know what I mean? is illegal as it is threatening. It is all about common sense and proportionality. If you are still unsure please consult the legal booklet. You can always contact us about legal issues and also check out www.freebeagles.org
