THE NEXT 12 MONTHS ARE CRITICAL FOR HLS. WITH A STAGGERING DEBT, LOSS OF MA

>> Editorial

The last three months have been devastating for Huntingdon, as their financial longevity starts to crumble. After a sustained campaign against Barclays for their position as HLS' top institutional shareholder, they sold all of their shares, leaving Huntingdon once again below the minimum listing standards of the NYSE ARCA exchange. Unsurprisingly the NYSE have so far turned a blind eye to this breach of their own regulations, but as Barclays will tell them, there is only so long you can ignore SHAC! And it's not just Barclays who have decided to find better places to invest their money; In the first few months of 2009, HLS lost 14 shareholders, including several from the top.

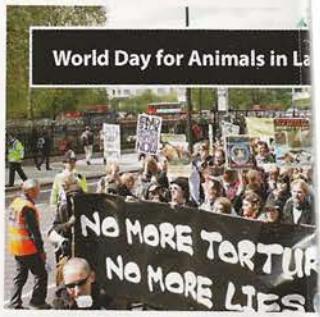

In a desperate attempt to claw their way out of financial ruin, HLS' CEO Andrew Baker has had an offer accepted to buy out HLS for $8.50 a share. This really is a desperate measure, and it is a well known fact that this was a last resort to save a company who were going to go bust.

HLS had no means of refinancing their 2011 loan, and with profits diving and their inability to retain shareholders or a healthy share price Andrew Baker has borrowed $113 million through Lion Holdings to save the company. Whilst the $8.50 deal has been accepted by the Directors (and of course it would, as if they didn't the company would go under) it has not yet been put to the shareholders who have to agree by majority. Already, three law firms in the US are starting class action lawsuits against HLS on behalf of shareholders to sue HLS who are set to lose a lot of money.

As Cass said this year, 'things remain uncertain' for 2009, and that is correct; in fact the loss of just two core customers could force them in to bankrupcy in their current financial situation. Also, the loss of a customer could even stop the Baker buyout altogether.

And on that note, whilst HLS' financials continue to drop, global SHAC demos continue to rise, with well over 100 more demos in the first 5 months of 2009 compared to the same period last year. If we all take action, and focus on HLS' top customers, victory is well within our grasp, but only if each and every one of us steps up and takes action.

>> If you want to get some rest - cut your ties with HLS!

When ADI infiltrated HLS in 2008, they were able to confirm that AstraZeneca were still paying for primate experiments throughout the duration of the SHAC campaign.

As a result of this discovery and learning of the horrific suffering endured by primates in HLS so recently, the global movement has stepped up against AstraZeneca. There has been demos across the world, including outside their AGM in London. As the AGM itself didn't kick off until the afternoon, the demo began in the morning outside of their UK HQ. As soon as the AGM started at the Marriot Hotel, so did the demo - loud, visual, and informative. Hundreds of leaflets were distributed to shocked passers-by, and AstraZeneca were left in no doubt as to the feelings of the public.

>> Campaign Overview

Huntingdon Life Sciences (HLS) are Europe's largest animal testing laboratory. HLS kill, maim and mutilate 500 animals every day in barbaric experiments.

HLS are the most exposed animal testing laboratory in the world, with seven separate undercover investigations spanning from 1989 to 2009, each discovering routine cruelty and abuse. HLS were famously exposed in 1997 when Channel 4 filmed undercover in their Cambridge Laboratory. They filmed workers punching beagle puppies in the face, falsification of data, unhygienic conditions and animal suffering. When workers spoke out in 2005, they said the same practices and behaviour were still commonplace.

In 2008 SHAC obtained research papers revealing that HLS were testing more artificial sweeteners, cleaning chemicals and mushroom extract as well as studies in to beagle pain syndrome. HLS have been exposed in 2009 by Animal Defenders International (ADI), who witnessed monkeys routinely ill from stress; chewing off their own fingers, vomiting faeces and collapsing. ADI also investigated the appalling conditions in which HLS' monkeys are bred and transported.

It is legal in a UK laboratory to burn, electrocute, starve, shoot and poison animals. Your M.P. and the RSPCA have no right of access to any UK laboratory, and Section 24 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 states that if anyone publicises what they have seen inside any UK laboratory they can be imprisoned for up to two years. What do these places have to hide?

Stop Huntingdon Animal Cruelty (SHAC) formed in 1999 to close HLS. SHAC have had some incredible successes, with hundreds of companies no longer dealing with the lab. At present, HLS do not even have a banker or insurance company - the UK Government acts as both using taxpayers money. HLS are millions of dollars in debt and many global companies have dropped HLS, including HSBC, Barclays, Lloyds TSB, Natwest, UBS, Marsh and Citigroup.

The best way to stay up to date with the most recent developments of the campaign along with all the demonstrations around the world is to check out our website. You can also find listings of all HLS' customers and suppliers on our website: www.shac.net

>> No let up for animal abusers!

During World Week for laboratory animals Swedish activists protested outside a vivisectors conference organized by SCAND-LAS (Scandinavian Society for Laboratory Animal Science). The conference consisted primarily of vivisectors from Scandinavian and Baltic countries but there were plenty of international guests and vivisectors, as well as animal breeders.

About fifty protestors attended the protest at the hotel and there were four days of very noisy, and angry protests, day and night for the duration of the conference. The message is clear - no matter where you are, there is no rest for animal abusers!

>> Embarrassment for Bayer and Novartis

When activists from SHAC Sheffield found out that HLS customers Novartis and Bayer were holding a seminar for health professionals at St Mary's community centre, they decided they should turn up and surprise them and tell everyone the truth about these companies and their involvement with HLS.

The public support was immense, and the megaphone ensured everyone inside knew about the sick experiments Novartis and Bayer fund at HLS. Several seminar attendees also took leaflets and were very interested in what the activists had to say. No doubt about it, that this would have been utterly embarrassing for Bayer and Novartis as the protest would have been a hot topic of discussion by those attending.

MAD SCIENCE

WEEK OF ACTION AGAINST HLS' TOP CUSTOMERS

25th - 31st May 2

1 WEEK > 10 COUNTRIES > 70 DEMOS

Routine animal cruelty and experiments that aren't scientifically valid certainly deserves recognition, so SHAC decided to create an award for the companies that are involved in mad science at HLS. Unlike many other scientific awards, our award comes with the added bonus of a loud demo outside your office and a globally co-ordinated week of action!

Following the success of Scary Science Week, SHACtivists from across the globe took part in Mad Science May, with over 70 protests taking place in five days against more than 30 different companies linked to HLS. Companies had the delight of being presented with their certificates to display proudly on their sterile office walls - a constant reminder of the time and money they waste funding HLS.

VICTORY!

barclays buckle under the pressure

Great news for everyone who took part in the Barclays campaign; whether you sent e-mails, faxes, letters, made phone calls or took to the streets and protested - you made this victory happen as Barclays have dumped their shares!

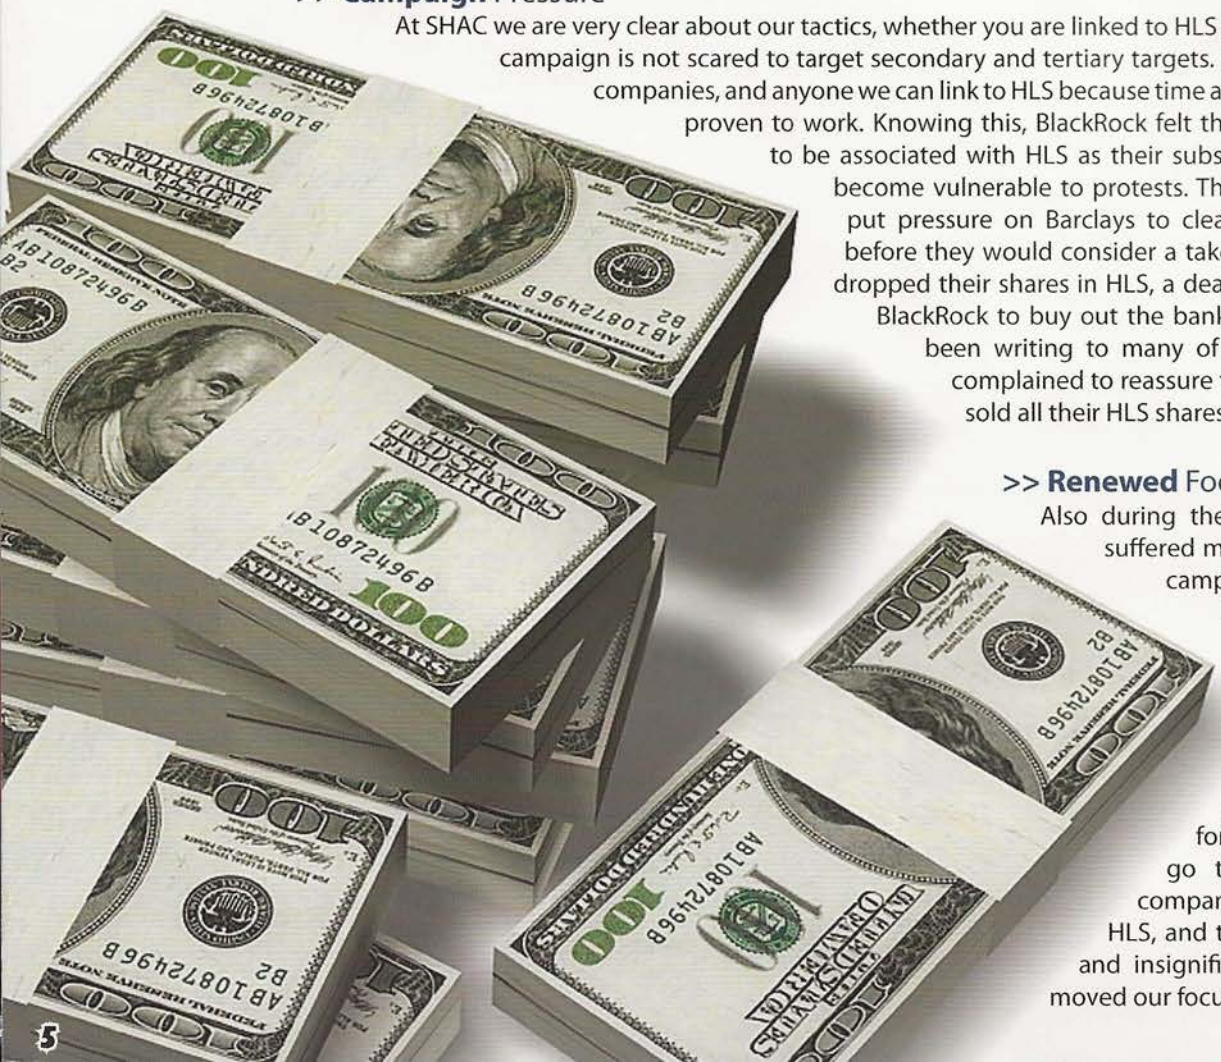

It had been a very long time since we had seen a UK bank buy shares in HLS, and because Barclays had become HLS' largest shareholder it was important that for a time our focus was shifted to them. To be honest we thought they had bit of a cheek daring to do this, but it isn't surprising as Brian Cass who heads HLS in UK keeps trying to deny the existence of the SHAC campaign; a tactic which had also been used in the USA. However, we lived up to our name with the motto, 'we never give in and we always win', as over the few months of campaigning, protests were rapidly increasing against the bank in the US, UK and Italy and there was no way Barclays could deny our existence.

To begin with they dug their heels in, refusing to discuss the matter or listen to anything any one had to say about HLS. They knew only too well what they were investing in when they bought their shares. It is not known what their true motivation was for buying the shares - it certainly wouldn't have been to make money as HLS are a high risk investment, and in fact, when they did dump their shares they made a loss. It is quite possible that they were perhaps testing the water - it is a well known fact that HLS are looking for a UK bank account and loan. This is why it was very important to send a clear message to Barclays and every other UK bank that we will not tolerate ANY bank who provide ANY services to HLS. We will not be deterred, and we will confront anyone who deals in the suffering of animals and show them this decision is the wrong one to make.

So, what made Barclays decide to dump their shares? Well, whilst Barclays were being stubborn, those on the outside looking in clearly thought they were being idiotic! A large financial investment company BlackRock had their eyes on Barclays and was considering a buyout. Obviously when a company is considering a buyout they look at the risks of that company. When BlackRock looked at Barclays, they saw an angry international campaign fighting against them and duly noted that SHAC came as part of the package, whether they liked it or not.

>> Campaign Pressure

At SHAC we are very clear about our tactics, whether you are linked to HLS directly, or indirectly, the campaign is not scared to target secondary and tertiary targets. We will target subsidiary companies, and anyone we can link to HLS because time and time again it has been proven to work. Knowing this, BlackRock felt that they could not afford to be associated with HLS as their subsidiary companies would become vulnerable to protests. This meant that BlackRock put pressure on Barclays to clear HLS off their books before they would consider a take over. Since Barclays dropped their shares in HLS, a deal has been made for BlackRock to buy out the bank, and Barclays have been writing to many of its customers who complained to reassure them that they have sold all their HLS shares.

>> Renewed Focus

Also during the first half of 2009 HLS suffered more losses as a sustained campaign in the US and UK lead The Bank of New York, Highbridge Capital and Wells Fargo to sell their shares. These were all top shareholders and a significant achievement for the campaign. As we go to print there are few companies left holding shares in HLS, and the holdings are so small and insignificant that we have now moved our focus onto HLS customers.

>> baker buyout

Andrew Baker has secured a loan of $113 million to buy out all the shares in HLS through a company he has set up called Lion Holdings. This offer has been accepted by the board of directors who have been in a panic over the future of HLS. If this offer goes through, it would mean Andrew Baker would own the whole company, and that HLS would have a new $113 million debt.

HLS already have huge debts with will be due for collection in the next two years and they simply cannot pay them off, they also can't find anyone to refinance the debt, so this buyout is a last resort to try and save the failing company.

It is well cited throughout the financial industries that this deal can only mean the company was near to going bust. In fact HLS is so weak that there are specific clauses in the buyout deal which prevent any disputes being aired in public; it has been reported in the media that this only happens when a company is in trouble and wants to hide that fact.

Whilst Bakers deal is binding, (meaning if he pulls out he would face a financial penalty) his offer can be withdrawn if HLS lose any of their customers. This is because if HLS lose a customer they will be in serious financial trouble, and unable to make their loan repayments.

This buyout deal is not yet signed and sealed as the shareholders have to vote by majority to accept the offer, and many of them bought their shares over $8.50 meaning they will lose a lot of money. Already three law firms are starting class action lawsuits to sue HLS, so even if the buyout does go through, HLS stand to lose a significant amount of money in legal fees and payouts.

>> first quarter financials expose hls' weaknesses

HLS published their first quarter finances in April 2009. HLS always try to put a positive spin on everything they do, but they struggled greatly this time - the figures speak for themselves. Without wanting to bog you all down with facts and figures you will be pleased to know that their income in the first quarter of this year is down 24% and net new orders made during the first quarter were down 43% compared to the same time last year. This is very significant, as HLS are already in debt and with very high costs - any drop in income has a knock-on effect throughout the company.

What this really means - and we cannot emphasise this enough - is that now more than ever HLS will be clinging on to their customers, as they simply cannot afford to lose them. HLS are now implementing staff cut backs to cope with the drop in demand and the Directors weren't able to take bonuses last year, some even took wage cuts. If HLS were to lose two of their big customers without new ones taking their place during this economic crisis, they would only survive with some kind of bailout. Losing custom could now lead to bankruptcy, so we urge you all more than ever to stand up for the animals; we cannot do this without your help.

Those at SHAC are already working tirelessly to close HLS so we need any one who can to get out on demos to get organised; and those who cannot get out on protests can help in a massive way by writing more letters, sending more emails, making more phone calls or helping raise funds for the campaign. Every little thing you do is most welcome and worthwhile - even if you can't do as much as you like, just holding a monthly information stall or leafleting in your local town could lead to a whole troop of activists joining the fight to close HLS.

Just remember the ADI expose from last year if you need any reason to step up against HLS. Never forget the animals we are fighting for...

"On the days when the animals were killed at the end of the experiment, the other monkeys would fall silent. The normal shrieking, chatter, and rattle of the cages fell to an eery silence. The magnitude of the monkeys' awareness of the nightmare they face could not be clearer."

sand anti-vivisection activists marched through the city of London to mark World Day for Animals in Labs as part e week of action for animals. The day is an internationally recognised, UN sanctioned event for the remembrance s millions of animals that suffer and die in vivisection laboratories around the world each year.

5 years since the anti-vivisection marched in London to mark World Day, successfully uniting, mobilising and sts to the movement. Campaigners in attendance from a wide range of groups included Stop Huntingdon Animal K Campaigns, Stop Wickham Animal Testing (SWAT), prisoner support groups, as well as Animal Liberation Front n anarchists all united for one day to peacefully protest and highlight the issue of animal experimentation.

and discussion had gone into staging the event. The overall attendance reflected this hard work, showing a ny had thought to be in decline following recent high profile arrests and imprisonments to be as strong and in numbers and resolve.

Hyde Park the flow of people stretched as far as the eye could see and drums, whistles and megaphones kept a rowd moving along as one. As the protest filtered through towards the city centre, the numbers were swelled by ers by who spontaneously joined the march in a show of disgust with the practice of vivisection.

veral excellent speakers, including Caroline Lucas, Green Party leader and MEP, Daniel, an anti-vivisection activist n Carmody, founder of the Irish group Animal Rights Action Network (ARAN), Richard Deboo spoke of his political unt, and Debbie from SHAC. Overall, a hugely successful day that nobody will forget!

LOBAL WORLD DAY DEMO ROUNDUP

would expect World Week for Lab Animals would include lots of protests against those who keep HLS open. rk kicked off with style, with big numbers outside the home of HLS' CEO Andrew Baker and the usual suspects xecutives from Bristol-Myers Squibb and Novartis. Info stalls were held and plenty of demos against HLS rators. Activists in Philly staged a number of protests including one outside the home of a GSK scientist; they vith all her neighbours as well as letting the public know about GSK and HLS. The activists then visited several areholders - all of which have now dumped their HLS shares!

ople in Santiago held a highly visual and theatrical march though some of the busiest avenues in the city. The went through areas where vivisection take place inside universities and past HLS customers, and the was a great success. During the week a separate protest was also staged outside GSK.

As always London activists were out on the streets protesting against customers and HLS shareholders; whilst in Finland, 15 activists took a bus to Espoo to protest at the Novartis and Bristol-Myers Squibb Finnish HQ's, which are conveniently side by side! The demo was incredibly loud and were able to tell many passing staff members about the horrors inside HLS.

urgent CALL TO ACTION

In 2008 we reported on the rescue of 129 rabbits from Highgate Rabbit Farm who breed beautiful innocent beings for animal research laboratories including Huntingdon Life Sciences. These animals were all placed into new loving homes to live a life very different to what they were destined, free from misery, pain and suffering. Photo's taken from inside the farm show that rabbits live in very small wire mesh cages without any kind of enrichment, and were suspended a few feet above inches of excrement and urine.

Following this rescue, the owner of the farm decided to close down his business. The remainder of animals at the farm were sold to HLS and the business started to wrap up. However, we have since learned that the police, determined to try to crush our spirit, decided that they did not wish the animal rights movement to have any kind of victory, and convinced the farmer to restart the business! The farm also received significant support from Brian Cass at HLS!

If this special action alert is successful, we will be able to close down this disgusting company, so we urge everyone reading this to write polite letters to Geoffrey Douglas of Highgate Farm, asking him to stop sending rabbits into HLS and to close his business down. The more letters he receives the more he will see how much opposition there is to what he does, and help him make his decision. Also, you can politely phone to ask him to stop supplying HLS and to stop breeding animals for vivisection. The owner made the right decision first time around and with your persuasion it isn't too late for him to change his mind!

You can also join us on Saturday 26th September for the national demo against Highgate Farm - see www.shac.net/OperationLiberation or the back cover for more info!

spotlight on AstraZeneca

This Swedish pharmaceutical company were conducting primate experiments at HLS when ADI went undercover last year. They have already dropped HLS once in the past when they were exposed by Channel 4, but returned after HLS claimed they had cleaned up their act.

AstraZeneca were very concerned over the ADI expose, and not surprising as their website claims, "the welfare of the animals we use is a top priority". This summer AZ sent representatives from the company to inspect HLS. Obviously this was an announced visit - we knew they were going, so did HLS, and so we are in no doubt everything looked exactly as AZ wished it would. It simply isn't good enough, if nothing else surely the fact that the primates in HLS which they were paying to have experimented on, live in an average space of just one cubic metre!

AZ are well aware of the exposés, but after their visit to HLS have concluded that HLS do not carry out any experiments which would cause an animal any pain! We all know this is rubbish, regardless of what our personal views on vivisection is, the simple fact is, that you need a license from the Home Office to carry out experiments on animals which have the potential to cause pain, whether it be "mild, moderate or severe". The experiments that AZ carry out at HLS are licensed and therefore it is a fact they cause pain - their utter denial of this is absolutely disgusting.

Please contact these AZ sites based here in the UK. They are sites which have also had many protests outside, so please use your letters to reinforce the message that dealing with HLS is completely unacceptable, and that the ADI expose carried out in 2008 shows that AZ are paying HLS to carry out cruel experiments on primates where many animals were so stressed they prolapsed, others were chewing their own limbs off, and others suffered from collapsed lungs from inhalation studies. AZ clearly don't know what pain is - if they think that is ok and painless, then maybe they should volunteer themselves to try it out!

> "activists went into the building and the entrance with 5 megaphones and the message was a simple one... anyone dealing with hls will get attention from us."

Like most countries around the world, Sweden is plagued with the usual line-up of money-grabbing, morally void animal abusing companies; Novartis, Bayer, Abbott, GSK, Schering Plough and of course AstraZeneca, who base one of their headquarters (complete with animal testing lab) there. Unfortunately for them all, Sweden is home to an increasingly growing animal rights movement who are not afraid to stand up and fight against these multinational giants. In the past couple of months, Stockholm and Göteborg have been particularly active, with vivisection conferences disrupted, buildings invaded, week-long demo tours and many loud, nosiy and big demos each week against HLS customers.

SHAC volunteers work tirelessly, seven days a week to bring an end to suffering like this. With your help, we can save more lives and stop the horrific cruelty going on inside HLS. SHAC is a global campaign that has closed HLS twice and is at the brink of closing them a third time - for good. Funds are an important part of keeping the campaign running; if you could spare any amount, even just £2 a month, we would greatly appreciate it. Don't let HLS get away with murder - take a stand!

>> SHAC DISCLAIMER

This newsletter is not intended to encourage illegal activity of any kind. SHAC's intent is to close down HLS by legitimate means only, spreading information and disseminating facts relating to Huntingdon Life Sciences' record of animal cruelty, fraud and incompetence. We believe there is more than enough evidence for the UK Government to withdraw Huntingdon's license and close them down. Readers must bear in mind that certain demonstrations, e.g. home demonstrations and office occupations are now illegal in the UK although they are perfectly legal in other countries, and the inclusion of reports relating to these demo's abroad does in no sense amount to encouragement to do similar demos in the UK.

Companies details are listed for the purpose of readers making informative and polite communications with the companies listed. The details are not intended for repetitive, rude or threatening calls. SHAC is a global organisation and so the laws differ from country to country. Sections 145 and 146 of SOCPA in the UK make it a specific offence to target a company involved in the vivisection industry with a view to getting them to sever a contract by illegal means.

So what does that mean? Does that mean demonstrations, phone calls and e-mails are now illegal? No it doesn't, but what it does mean is to target a company illegally is. So what does illegally mean? Well, for example, to ring a company up and say they should stop dealing with HLS "or else" is illegal because it is threatening. It is all about using your common sense and proportionality. If you are still unsure please consult the legal booklet. You can always contact us about legal issues and also check out: www.freebeagles.org.

PROTEST TO CLOSE DOWN HIGHGATE RABBIT FARM

Saturday 26th September 2009

>> Meet 12 noon at Highgate Rabbit Farm:

Highgate Farm, Highgate Lane, Normanby-By-Spital, Market Rasen, Lincolnshire, LN8 2HQ

Operation Liberation is a demonstration with a difference taking place against Highgate Rabbit Farm. Highgate breed rabbits and ferrets which are then tortured to death inside animal testing laboratories, including HLS. This farm was exposed in 2008 when 129 rabbits were rescued from living in bare cages in a shed full of excrement and urine. After this action, Highgate stopped supplying animals for vivisection, but have reluctantly resumed after being convinced by the police.

We are asking everyone to stand up against this barbaric trade and help us to close Highgate on this special day! Transport is being arranged from across the country, so please get in touch for more info or to book coach places.
