EDITORIAL

This is the third action-packed newsletter for the US campaign to close down HLS and it only covers the last two months. There have been so many demonstrations, victories, and so much energy pouring into this most important effort that the following pages barely contain the fervor and intensity that comprises this campaign. From every part of America we've heard back about the actions you've taken and the support you've received in your community, and we apologize that we cannot fit every article in this newsletter.

As exciting as these last two months have been in that we have pushed HLS to the brink of closure, the campaign has not been without a backlash. This summer alone we have seen over 40 arrests at HLS demonstrations, two new injunctions filed, and an even bigger (and more pitiful) RICO lawsuit amended. The actions taken by HLS show desperation and should serve as an indicator to the rest of us that now is the time to double our efforts.

These last two months have proven to us that we are the only hope the animals have that HLS will be closed down. The UK government has proven itself an enemy of compassion and integrity, the police have abused and harassed activists, and letters and pleas for help from OUR elected representatives have been responded to with false promises and empty lip service. These disappointments aside, we never really had much faith in these avenues and know that, despite the entrenched opposition, we are smarter, more creative, more dedicated and WE WILL WIN! HLS will close down and a message will be sent to animal abusers everywhere that the power of the grassroots animal rights movement cannot be defeated.

Every day of the week we get scores of e-mails, letters, and phone calls from people across the county begging to know what they can do to help this effort. Our initial answer is always very basic: know everything there is to know about this vile lab. Go to www.shacusa.net and www.shac.net and read about the five undercover investigations into the lab, read about the animal cruelty and the fraudulent science, find out who HLS's customers and shareholders are, and find out where they live. Most importantly, we plead with people to look at the pictures on the web page. No matter how hard it is, we want people to look into the eyes of those puppies and other animals, that are now dead, and let those images fill you heart, not with sadness, but with ANGER. Those animals inside HLS right now do not need our tears, THEY NEED OUR ACTION!

Please read this newsletter from cover to cover. Use the action sheet and get your friends and family involved. Please take ideas and inspiration from this newsletter, and let the amazing actions of those in the underground MAKE your hearts sing!

The road traveled to close HLS is a long and bumpy one, but the end is in sight now. We all know what we have to do to finish the job off, so let's get to it!"

SHAC HISTORY: In late November of 1999, a small group of experienced animal rights campaigners in England started Stop Huntingdon Animal Cruelty (SHAC) with the sole intention of organizing against only HLS until it was closed, whether it take three months or three years. They started this campaign after their two previous and now legendary campaign victories against Consort Kennels (beagle breeder for vivisection) and Hillgrove Farm (last private commercial cat breeder for vivisection in England). These campaigns not only saved countless cats and dogs, but saw mobilization of the grassroots animal rights movement and created a recipe for success that has since been used to shut down Shamrock Monkey Farm and Regal Rabbits. HLS was chosen because of its weak financial position and the condemning evidence yielded from 5 undercover investigations showing animal cruelty and sloppy science.

This newsletter is not meant to incite or encourage illegal activities. We neither condemn nor condone property destruction. What actions you take and how far you are willing to go to save animals' lives is entirely up to you.

Regional Demo Targets HLS Support and the Lab

July 13, 2001

(New Jersey) Caravans traveled from locations all over the Northeast including Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Long Island to converge in New Jersey for a day of action against HLS. Each city traveled to undisclosed locations to deliver surprise visits on companies and individuals associated with HLS.

the bank knocked over an American flag and other items and scattered leaflets around the building. Aside from criminal mischief, the six adults and two juveniles were charged with disorderly conduct, harassment and defiant trespassing.

The adults are identified as: Scott Brussechetti, 22, of Philadelphia; Melissa Warner, 18, and Darius Fullmer, 24, both of New Brunswick; Gary Powell, 18, and Russell Powell, 20, both of Belle Mead; and Kelly Higgins, 20, of North Brunswick.

All remained at the Middlesex County Adult Correction Center in North Brunswick last evening in lieu of $2,500 bail each.

There was no information released on the juveniles.

Fullmer, a spokesman for the local chapter of the Animal Defense League, issued a statement last week condemning the Bank of New York for what he called its financial support of Huntingdon Life Sciences.

Prior to the North Brunswick incident last night, about 70 activists staged an orderly protest outside the Huntingdon Life Sciences facility on Mettlers Road in Franklin from about 4 p.m. until 6:45 p.m.

The activists have been conducting monthly demonstrations at Huntington Life Sciences and it was at the May demonstration that they were presented by police with a restraining order prohibiting them from demonstrating at the homes of company employees.

The group also held a protest on June 20 outside of the Bank of New York branch in Metuchen. There were no arrests there.

WILLIAM D. FRED/Gannett New Jersey

Roger Nokes of Edison yells during a protest by animal-rights activists yesterday outside the Huntingdon Life Sciences building in Franklin. The demonstrators say the company is treating animals in an inhumane way during its research.

This strategy kept the police guessing and activists on their toes. Bristol Meyers Squibb, Morgan Stanley Dean Whitter, Novartis, and Darioush "Dari" Dadgar, VP of Analytical Services at HLS, are among over a dozen targets that received unannounced protests throughout the day. Eight activists were arrested after allegedly holding a disruption inside a Bank of New York.

The regional protest brought dozens of new activists who volunteered their Friday to travel out of state to take action against HLS. Following the day's events, over 100 protesters converged at HLS to protest against the lab itself. Due to a blatantly unconstitutional injunction limiting the number of protesters at the lab to 50, activists staged a dramatic "changing of the guards" style march allowing each person to share their feelings with HLS workers leaving for the day.

The day wrapped up with a home demonstration at HLS Director of Human Resources Cathy Brower's house. Activists traveled to the Brower residence in Middlesex County to avoid yet another injunction which places restrictions on home demonstrations in Somerset County. Midway through the protest, unknown individual(s) threw red paint at Brower's home spotting the front of her house, a clear message to neighbors that this woman has blood on her hands.

SHAC Speaking Tour

From Coast to Coast SHAC is Relentlessly Promoting the Campaign to Close Down HLS

Passionate animal rights activists and concerned members of various communities came out for an informational town meeting addressing the nightmare that is HLS and what everyone can do to help close it down, no matter where they are. SHAC speakers discussed the atrocities which occur in the Huntingdon Life Sciences laboratory in East Millstone, New Jersey, and the commitment of dedicated activists across the world who will stop at nothing short of closing down this vile institution for good. Speakers inspired audiences with the victorious history and growing momentum of this international effort to close HLS and why it is being referred to as one of the most important and successful campaigns in the history of the animal rights movement.

SHAC made stops in New York City, Philadelphia, New Jersey, Washington DC (AR2001), Charlotte, Seattle, Portland, Eugene, San Francisco, and Salt Lake City. Several more dates are still scheduled to cover the Midwest and the South. SHAC provided a free vegan buffet for attendees at the East Coast stops and dropped campaign resources in every city including videos, t-shirts, leaflets, stickers, lists of targets, and lots of ideas on how to smash HLS!

Activists Cancel HLS AGM and Storm NYC Investors

June 14, 2001

(New York City) Mid-June saw a great day of protests against HLS's financial supporters. The event was originally scheduled for the HLS annual shareholder's meeting. They had moved the legally-required yearly shareholder's meeting to New York after UK activists had repeatedly taken over the meetings. Huntingdon realized the same would happen here, as we acquired enough shares to bring people in on a single share a piece, and had scores of activsts ready to bring HLS the questions they did not want to answer.

Just days before the meeting, Huntingdon announced they were postponing it indefinitely. This type of move, especially at the eleventh hour, is very rare in the financial community and speaks very poorly of HLS. They claimed this was necessary because of a "scheduling conflict." More accurately, it was postponed because activists scheduled conflict. Protest plans continued for the day unabated, with a series of protests in midtown Manhattan at various Huntingdon financial supporters.

The day began at Quilcap, who owns 11.74% of HLS shares. After a short rally outside, some activsts decided to take the message inside. They were met at the doors by the building's security force, leading to a lengthy standoff with activists effectively barricading the building by occupying the revolving doors. Others remained on the street, educating pedestrians to the horrors of HLS.

The group of approximately 70 activists then moved to the New York office of Stephens Inc., the lab's main financial supporter and largest shareholder. A large contingent of activists flowed through the revolving doors, easily moving past the befuddled security. After a loud display in the lobby, activists made a break for the elevators in the rear of the massive building. They were only stopped from bringing the protest to Stephens'S offices on the 24th floor when security shut down the elevators.

Overzealous security guards at this point began pushing and choking activists, trying to physically detain some. Other activists successfully de-arrested them by physically pulling them free from the guards. Reportedly there was

HLS NEWS

Nowhere to Run, Nowhere to Hide!

A proposal to secure the anonymity of investors who buy shares in Huntingdon Life Sciences, the animal testing laboratory under siege from "violent" protesters, is expected in the next few weeks, in an effort to restore normal trading in the stock.

Lawyers acting for the Association of Private Client Investment Managers and Stockbrokers are looking at a variety of options to protect individuals and stockbrokers from animal rights activists. The Financial Services Authority is understood to have given its blessing to the idea of a corporate nominee account, in which investors' identities would be hidden by the company.

Editor's Note: This sad attempt by HLS to thwart the efforts of the campaign is too little, too late. We already have in our focus their most important financial allies and nothing will deter us from ruining their bloody investments. Even if this plan is implemented there are a number of other ways to learn who is buying shares and deserving of our attention!

Don't Bank on it!

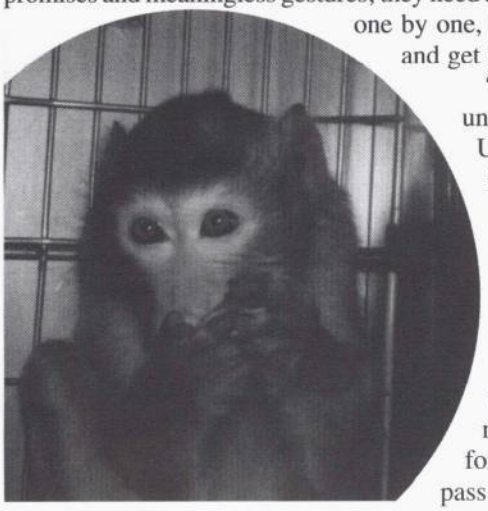

After the Natwest Bank canceled HLS's banking facility, the failing lab scoured the UK financial landscape looking for a bank that would restore this service. Not one single bank would step up and assist it. HLS was in the position of not being able to cash or write checks. What a shambles of a company! HLS was forced to go begging to the Department of Trade and Industry in the UK, a governmental agency. The bank account they were given does not leave HLS in a good financial position and is the last step before complete financial failure.

SHAC-USA's Response on the Bank of England and HLS Relationship:

"This is yet a further sign of weakness from HLS and that it is dead in the water financially... Unable to survive on its own, HLS was forced to take government assistance in the form of an account with the Bank of England, who normally provides services only to the Government. HLS has not received government money, contrary to misleading press headlines. HLS has been provided with an account that cannot exceed 100 million pounds, has no loan or overdraft facility, and is expected not to be able to collect any interest on money stored in the account. Some deal!

"The government's true colors have shown. They do not care about doing what is right or the wishes of those who voted them in; they care about appeasing the 7 billion pound a year pharmaceutical industry in the UK.

"If you did not believe it before, let this be a lesson for us all now. We must take action ourselves to close down HLS, and not put our faith in elected officials. Those 500 animals that will die inside of HLS today do not need false promises and meaningless gestures; they need all of us to take out HLS's investors one by one, take the lab apart brick by brick, and get them out as soon as possible...

"And to HLS: let it be known, in no uncertain terms, that a listing in the US will be met with considerable force and public opposition. Once delisted in the UK, you've already more than half lost the battle, as Brian Cass said so himself on the Cambridge Evening News, and we will waste no time in preying upon your financial vulnerabilities. You will find the US climate no more hospitable than the UK for the kind of barbarity you try to pass off as science."

Bank of New York Faces Internal Attack by Activists!

August 1, 2001

(New York) Stop Huntingdon Animal Cruelty was leaked highly confidential documents, records and account information on some of the Bank of New York's biggest customers. Anonymous animal rights activists were able to leak out this information resulting in a major security breach for the Bank of New York.

The documents and records (posted at www.bankofnykills.com) are internal records detailing the accounts of such big name customers as the Bank of China, Unilever, and several other major companies. This could have disasterous consequences for the BNY as it shows a serious breakdown in customer confidentiality.

The records, leaked to Stop Huntingdon Animal Cruelty from an anonymous source, were made public to tarnish the image of the Bank of New York in protest of their financial support of Huntingdon Life Sciences, the notorious animal testing lab being shut down by animal rights groups internationally.

According to a SHAC representative, "this breach should serve as a wake up call to the BNY. Is the hassle, embarrassment, and loss of business really worth supporting a company convicted of punching beagle puppies in the face?"

BREAKING NEWS: As we go to press, the BankofNYKills site has been taken down by its server in the face of a lawsuit filed against SHAC. The suit alleges violations of the Digital Millenium Act and Copyright Infringement. We expect the site to be up again shortly.

Nearing the end of the demonstration police arrived with their own understanding of the injunction. Activists stated that the injunction applied to Somerset, not Middlesex, County. However officers were undeterred in arresting the remaining 21 people from the protest site. All arrestees were transferred to the Middlesex County Jail and held on a staggering $25,000 bail.

Jail support continued throughout the weekend with demonstrations and the announcement of the Investor of the Week as the Middlesex County Jail. Prisoners were denied phone calls and food, and some over the age of 70 were denied necessary heart medication. After four days, all activists were released on reduced bail. The case is currently in the courts and will spark a civil suit for the blatant civil rights violation.

If similar suppression of peoples' rights continues, there is sure to be more red paint and more broken windows. When non-violent activists are arrested, held on $25,000 bail, denied food, phone calls and medication, what other recourse do compassionate people have than to take their activity underground?

The turnout for the events was a success. The campaign demonstrated it's broad-base appeal as many people new to animal protection came to find out how they could become a part of it. Additionally several organizations across the West Coast have committed themselves to taking HLS on as one of their primary campaigns and have promised to smash all local investors and customers of HLS.

BUAV's Michelle Thew and Sarah Kite admire the SHAC table at AR2001

Within no time HLS will be a household name across this country, synonymous with animal cruelty, and will have no place left to hide!

SHAC Makes a Splash at Animal Rights 2001

SHAC had one of the busiest tables at the national animal rights conference. For five days attendees swarmed the table taking literature, watching the SHAC video, asking loads of questions, and vowing to help in whatever way they can.

SHAC speakers participated in high profile workshops. One focused on direct tactics and how the HLS campaign has been on the forefront of econo-activism by targeting HLS's financial allies. The other workshop, given to a full room, was almost entirely on the HLS campaign and left attendees with little doubt that HLS is dead in the water!

Americans for Medical Profits (AMP) a pro-death / pro-animal testing organization attended the conference and wrote the summary below of the HLS presentation. For being opponents of this campaign they certainly hit the nail on the head with this assessment. Let's not prove them wrong!

AMP ON THE HLS CAMPAIGN

Kevin Jonas is a fiery speaker, totally committed to the Stop Huntingdon Animal Cruelty (SHAC) campaign. "Closing HLS is my life and this campaign will remain my life until HLS is closed," he said. The SHAC campaign, Jonas said, "targets the pillars of HLS's financial support," and has been so successful that HLS is "on its last leg. All that's needed is just one more kick."

"There's no stopping this campaign," declared Jonas. "There's no end to what we can do to HLS. We'll take out their customers, their workers. There are a lot of options." Jonas, who acknowledged that he's been visited by representatives of the FBI and the Joint Terrorism Task Force, also predicted, "There will be windows broken and cars flipped [as the campaign continues]."

Jonas called Stephens Inc., which extended a loan to HLS earlier this year, "enemy number one in this country." He said there would be "constant protests against Stephens" and its officials at their offices, on the golf course and in their homes until it calls its loan from HLS.

Noting that SHAC intends to target shareholders as well as officials of institutions related to HLS, he observed that targeting investors is especially effective "because investment isn't meant to be that personal." In other words, his argument is that people don't have an affinity to the companies in which they invest and therefore targeting them through protests at their homes or offices is particularly uncomfortable as it personalizes investment activity. Jonas gave tips on various ways to identify the employees of an organization.

When a person in the audience mentioned the British government's recent intervention in finding HLS a banker, Jonas said, "We don't care what the government does. The government is nothing to us. The government will never close HLS down. We will!"

AGM Canceled

some damage done to the building, although details are not known. All left without arrest and joined the activists remaining outside to educate the lunch-hour rush of pedestrians, and maintained a loud protest at Stephens's steps for approximately half an hour.

The group then moved next door to a conveniently-located Bank of New York branch. Activists entered the bank without resistance. When security did finally attempt to block the doors, one activist, clearly carrying a "CLOSE HLS" sign actually got in by telling the guard he had to use the ATM.

The bank was completely disrupted for a short time until police arrived and asked activists to leave. One woman who was in the bank at the time left and talked to the protesters outside, learned about the issue, and decided to close her BNY account. On the way out, everything within reach was knocked over or thrown about, creating quite a mess. The protest continued across their steps for some time.

Morgan Stanley Dean Whitter was the next target, as they had recently purchased 22 million shares. A loud and vocal protest let this company know what a mistake they had made by becoming involved with HLS.

To wind up the day, another Bank of New York building was protested, with the usual cacophany of speak-outs, whistles blowing, and chanting. Later in the day a group of activists reappeared at Bank of New York's headquarters location on Wall St. for another disruption. No rest for the wicked!

This day made it clear, in no uncertain terms, that any association with Huntingdon Life Sciences is a bad business move and there will be consequences for supporting such cruelty.

Targeting HLS and Stephens from Coast to Coast...

New Jersey

On June 8th, HLS saw yet again that we will NOT quit until all the animals are free! ADL-NJ hosted the monthly demo outside of the lab with a large number of protestors in attendance. As usual, the police showed up to a peaceful protest with paddy wagons and pepper spray. But no activist was to be intimidated. Every employee was screamed at while they left their job and reminded that they will not remain faceless: we know who they are and where they live.

The Bank of New York has also been reminded on a weekly basis that their continued support of animal abusers will NOT be tolerated. ADL-NJ is running a protest tour of BNY locations in New Jersey, which will culminate in a giant protest outside of their NYC headquarters. This protest is the beginning of a weekend of events and actions against the Bank of New York. We will be outside their banks, we will be outside their headquarters, and on the doorsteps of their homes.

We will not stop until HLS has shut it's doors forever and all the animals are free!

Little Rock

Little Rock, Arkansas - HQ for Stephens Inc. - is feeling the heat as October 29th has been announced and we have started a countdown till SHAC comes to town at each demo. Passers by and employees of Stephens have been more supportive than ever. Our presence is attracting more car honks and thumbs up than ever before as the media and public education is getting the word out about Stephens's cruel investment. We have noticed an increase in security as they have added six more guards at the main entrance.

Seattle

The campaign in Seattle was given a swift shot in the arm after someone anonymously set off a powerful stinkbomb in the Stephens Inc. office downtown. The odor was so strong that it cleared three floors of the massive Bank of America office tower for an entire day. Haz-Mat crews were called in and five city blocks were closed while police investigated.

Local activists took this as a cue that it was time to get active in the campaign against HLS and began holding disruptions of Stephens' office. Walk-throughs, large demos, and phone blockades have all been happening consistently, and now surrounding cities have vowed to get involved in the campaign as well.

We have also begun to hear rumors that Bank of America and Stephens employees sympathetic to the campaign are sabotaging equipment and leaving anti-HLS literature in the building. Every time activists show up, the building's elevators are shut down, and now Stephens has placed security outside their office. Hopefully Bank of America will get the hint that Stephens isn't worth their time. SHAC-Seattle and NARN promise to continue being a committed and militant participant in this campaign.

Minneapolis

SHAC Minneapolis has been focusing on HLS's customers. On May 19th, we held our first demo outside a local grocery store. We entered the grocery store to ask people not to buy products that were made by Bayer, GlaxoSmithKline, and Pfizer - all HLS customers. We also began a petition requesting that the store refuse to carry these items because of the unnecessary, cruel, and often fraudulent 'science' performed in HLS's labs. SHAC Mpls also took part in the Day of Action Against Novartis on June 25th. Novartis is not only a customer of HLS, but one of the world's largest biotechnology companies, as well as a sponsor of the WTO and FTAA. Forming a coalition of many animal rights, anti-globalization, and anti-biotech activists, the day's purpose was to declare Novartis and its spin-off company, Syngenta Seeds, a Biohazard. During the day activists hung a huge banner reading "Novartis/HLS: Killing the Earth and Her Inhabitants One Experiment at a Time," and took over an office inside.

Many HLS customers also have vested interest in biotech and globalization, truly making the campaign against HLS 'One Struggle, One Fight!'

New York City

The campaign to close HLS has done wonders to revive the grassroots animal rights movement in NYC. Meeting attendance has multiplied tenfold, groups are working together to give HLS's investors hell, and participation is through the roof.

July 27th through August 3rd, NYC campaigners held a week of action against HLS. The week kicked off with a roving demonstration against BNY. Followed by an excessive police force, protesters outwitted officers by changing the unannounced route - which New York's finest thought they'd figured out - in the middle of the march. Protesters looked on in amusement as police cruisers went down one-way streets towards the presumed target while campaigners traveled on foot in the opposite direction towards a different BNY location.

The week was rounded out with a phone/fax/e-mail blockade against Stephens, our first monthly meeting, a protest at Stephens' NYC office and our weekly table in the East Village.

Additionally, phone booths, lampposts, newspaper boxes and subways in all corners of the city have been plastered with HLS stickers. And, rumor has it that throughout the month of July, Stephens received hundreds of requests for tickets to Madonna's 5 sold-out NYC shows from fans who thought they were calling Steven's Ticket Brokers!

Chicago

Activists in the greater Chicagoland area have come together to join the effort to close HLS. We leaflet weekly at the Stephens office downtown and on the "Magnificent Mile," Chicago's upscale shopping district. Response to our efforts has been positive.

We have also protested at the homes of Stephens executives, including Vice President/Branch Manager Janet Rouse and Senior Vice President James M. Schutz. At both events we distributed "How Well Do You Know Your Neighbor?" literature to the surrounding areas.

During our summer week of action, five banners reading "500 Will Die - SHACUSA.net" were hung over highway overpasses before the morning rush hour, in addition to our daily leafletings and phone blockades of both the Chicago and national offices.

Stephens is currently in the process of trying to prevent us from hosting home demonstrations and are attempting to dictate the time, place and manner of our office leafletings, claiming that SHAC has "caused Stephens irreparable harm" by being there.

In the coming months, we will continue to focus on Stephens and do outreach to our local Bank of New York office. We will also be going to Little Rock, Arkansas, to join other SHAC supporters in the National Demonstration at Stephens Headquarters.

San Francisco

The HLS campaign in San Francisco is just beginning. Just weeks after 12 activists blockaded themselves in a Stephens conference room, the company packed its bags and left San Francisco. It was further learned that Stephens' Bay Area contact person, Barbara Staton, was simulataneously leaving the company, stating animal activists had ruined her life, targeting her at home, on the phone, and through hundreds of daily e-mails.

Stephens and HLS responded to San Francisco's involvement in the campaign by attempting to depose three local activists for the ongoing RICO suit. The response? The fifth was plead to every question, much to the attorney's chagrin.

Since then ARDAC has moved on to target Bank of America and will soon announce its next HLS target.

Atlanta

ADL Atlanta has been making life uncomfortable for the death merchants at Stephens Inc. An office disruption during World Week for Animals In Labs caused a major ruckus in the Stephens office and led to the arrests of three activists. The action piqued the interest of the FBI's Joint Terrorism Task Force, who made an appearance at the court date and has been seen (and videotaped) at several local demos since.

Several weeks later we had a week long leafleting where we were handed out hundreds of flyers and stuffed them in free newspapers all over the area.

In addition to actions at Stephens, a leaflet drop was done at the Atlanta Hilton Hotel during a conference sponsored by the Bank of New York. Five hundred leaflets depicting the horrors of HLS and BNY's support were dropped over the heads of attendees.

We are just getting started here in Atlanta, bigger and better things are in the works.

Los Angeles

We've been researching prospective targets in Southern California and are gearing up to deal a couple of blows to BNY and other HLS affiliates. Meanwhile, there have been several phone/fax blockades at BNY's loan production office coinciding with regular protests outside. This and another BNY office have been repeatedly wheatpasted with hundreds of anti-BNY and HLS posters and stickers.

When activists learned of Morgan Stanley Dean Whitter's purchase of 22 million shares in HLS, office disruptions occurred in two of their high-rise LA offices. Activists distributed flyers and caused a commotion before moving to the Bank of New York subsidiaries. They breached security again, throwing flyers and placing stickers about the offices for several minutes before plastering the security booth with anti-BNY stickers upon exit.

It was also reported that anti-BNY and HLS messages were painted on the walls and sidewalk outside of the building.

Boston

Boston Citizens for Animal Liberation (BCAL) have been keeping the pressure on Stephens Inc. by targeting our local office. Since occupying their office during World Week for Animals In Labs, Stephens has seen a consistent and constant presence outside their office.

Twice a month on Friday afternoon we greet Stephens workers as they leave for the weekend. We distribute hundreds of flyers to Boston's busy financial district at each demo.

In July, BCAL held a week of action against Stephens. A week-long phone and e-mail blockade made sure that no Stephens employee would get any work done.

As the summer begins to wrap up, we are increasing our presence outside of Stephens. It is surely becoming clear to those at Stephens who have lost their offices to occupations, those who won't answer their phones, and those with flooded e-mail boxes, that Stephens made a foolish decision to bail HLS out of bankruptcy.

News from the UK

Activists in the UK continue to stick it to HLS all around Europe. SHAC-UK has chosen SHELL as its next target. In 2000, Shell contracted HLS to test two substances used as plasticisers for PVC on pregnant rats. After various tests, the experimenters concluded that the significance of their observations was unclear. Once again, cruel and useless experimentation at HLS.

Meanwhile, protests have continued around the country against anyone and everyone associated with HLS. June 23rd saw a national rally against the lab itself. Over 1000 protesters gathered in a town center with drums, megaphones, whistles and banners creating a loud ruckus for all the town to see. Protesters visited information tables and heard speakers on the HLS campaign before staging a march through Cambridge. The town was brought to a standstill and the force and momentum of the HLS campaign was clear.

Not all protests across the UK have remained on ground level. On May 30th two activists gained access to the roof of the Yamanouchi UK Headquarters (Yamanouchi contracted HLS to saw and break the legs of 37 beagles in the course of an experiment) and dropped a banner reading "Yamanouchi Pay Huntingdon Life Sciences to Break Beagles Legs." They remained there for an hour.

In a similar fashion, protesters paid a visit to Bank of New York director Alan Powell's home. Two activists climbed atop Powell's roof and unfurled a banner reading "Alan Powell Bank of New York, 94 Million Shares in Huntingdon Life Sciences, Animal Abusing Laboratory!" The activists stayed on Powell's roof for 9 hours as a helicopter circled over Powell's house, his road was closed off and 60 police officers pondered how the protesters got atop the roof and how on earth to get them down!

below: activists take over the roof of [redacted] home, director of Bank of New York

In addition to marches and rooftop protests, HLS and its supporters have also been subjected to lockdowns from animal rights activists. On June 6th nine activists U-locked themselves to the main entrances of Morgan Stanley Dean Whitter which holds 22 million shares in HLS. In order to remove the activists, security guards removed the 10ft handles off the doors! A month later, on July 5th at 4pm, just before workers were due to go home, SHAC supporters drove five cars up to the gates of HLS. As the activists arrived, security guards slammed the gates and ran inside. Cars were parked in front of the gates and 10 activists locked themselves underneath the vehicles. After over an hour of HLS workers being locked inside the gates, security guards destroyed HLS's hedge to enable them to leave the site!

Nor have UK activists stuck to the United Kingdom while smashing HLS. The campaign has been taken abroad on two protest tours of Europe. Both tours saw disruptions in and outside offices of HLS customers and investors, as well as home demonstrations of the company's directors. Merial, a former HLS customer who received a rowdy in-office disruption, vowed to make a statement saying they are not a customer of HLS and Pharmacia got right on the phone to their U.S. offices. Staff cars at numerous companies have been covered in stickers. The European protest tour has received strong support as workers at the companies have approached demonstrators to dish the dirt on the companies they are working for. Likewise there has been strong support from the communities as local animal rights groups have joined up and vowed to start targeting their local HLS affiliates. More protest tours to come!

The above activity makes the state of the HLS campaign clear: everyone has their eye on the target and with a campaign growing from country to country, it won't be long until the hellhole that is HLS is closed for good!

A VIEW OF THE US FROM THE UK:

Well, what do we think about the USA SHAC actions here in the UK? Absolutely amazing! We are all now part of a global campaign to close HLS letting them know that they can run but we will track them down and destroy them - whether that be in the UK, US or even Japan.

SHAC USA is I think way ahead of where any of us thought it would be and it must have startled and then enraged Stephens, the Bank of New York and other US HLS backers and customers. You can tell the effect you are having by the way your enemy reacts and remember this - companies do not take out multi-million dollar lawsuits if you are not having an effect.

When history is told it will show that HLS was financially destroyed on both sides of the Atlantic. When you read this you have a choice. When the gates of HLS close you can bullshit yourself or others that you played your part in destroying one of the world's largest animal testing labs when in fact you did nothing or...

YOU CAN LOOK YOURSELF IN THE MIRROR KNOWING YOU DID EVERYTHING IN YOUR POWER TO DESTROY THE MONSTERS OF HLS AND THAT YOU HELPED SHUT THEM DOWN!

The animals cannot wait and neither should you so please please close your eyes and picture the animals slowly dying and crying out in pain inside the torture labs. Keep this image with you - then get out there and smash 'em. We know who they are and where they are so GO GET 'EM!

CUSTOMER CAMPAIGN

Throughout this summer SHAC USA and SHAC UK sent a package of information on HLS to almost every pharmaceutical and biotech company in the country. The package included a booklet documenting HLS's screw-ups with the controversial xenotransplantation study, an info sheet on the investigation at HLS Occold exposing inept and drunken employees, and a letter asking the company to clarify their relationship with HLS. SHAC-USA has received an overwhelming response from the mailing. Companies from around the US have been contacting us stating they are not and will NEVER be a customer of HLS. Many were quite appreciative of the information we provided and were shocked at the incompetence of HLS.

National embarassment for HLS was something they did take notice of. In mid-July Brain Cass (mismanaging director of HLS) sent out a panicked letter to all of HLS's customers pleading with them to ignore our attempts at engaging them about HLS's poor research practices and the legacy of animal cruelty. Cass pitifully attempted to discredit the investigative reports by pointing out some of the pictures in them did not come from HLS (even though we stated this ourselves and cautioned they were used to illustrate what the written documentation from inside of HLS made reference to).

Never deterred, and more inspired than ever now that we know this type of action gets under the skin of HLS, SHAC-USA has endeavored, with the aide of the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine, to document and convince the customers of HLS that their products are not tested for accurate safety if tested at HLS. PCRM doctors have re-viewed and critiqued published HLS studies highlighting the poor science behind HLS using animal models. The letter also included an invitation to meet with or engage in any sort of dialogue with SHAC or PCRM regarding further reasons to avoid HLS and seek alternatives to animal testing. These informational packages are being sent to all known and suspected HLS customers as of the time of this publication), and SHAC is confident we will have exciting news to report in the next newsletter!

EXPERIMENTS TO TRY AND SOLVE THE PROBLEM OF HUMAN ORGAN REJECTION

HLS is regularly the subject of undercover investigations which prove time and time again that HLS constantly breaches principles of Good Laboratory Practices, has broken the law, falsified doses and mistreated animals causing horrific suffering.

The largest ever leak of documents from a vivisection laboratory was run by Daily Express in the UK and they covered the fourth expose of cruelty at HLS on the 21st and 22nd of September 2000. The confidential documents gave us hard evidence of the daily cruelty, incompetence and horrific suffering which is all in a day's work behind the locked doors of HLS labs.

The documents cover over five years of xenotransplantation experiments commissioned by Imutran Ltd. and conducted by Huntingdon Life Sciences at their research center in Huntingdon, England. Despite an intensive research effort at HLS since 1995, the sacrifice of hundreds of primates and thousands of pigs, the goal of achieving viable xenotransplantation remains as remote as ever. The experiments HLS conducted were a dismal failure.

What is Xenotransplantation?

Xenotransplantation is the transplantation of live organs, tissues or cells between different species. Such transplants are also referred to as xenografts. The program of xenotransplantation research designed and commissioned by Imutran is ethically and legally controversial because of the intensive suffering inflicted on higher primates and pigs, the low probability of any human benefit arising, and the potential danger posed to human health.

Confidential Documents

The leaked documents include 39 draft reports describing xentransplantation experiments on higher primates, correspondence, meeting minutes, feasibility studies and internal reports, concering many aspects of the conduct of and plans for confidential xenotransplantation research. The experiments were an attempt to place pig hearts into primates.

Controversial Research

Quite apart from the revelations contained in the acquired documents, xenotransplantation research has been widely regarded as controversial because of:

- The potential of xenotransplantation to introduce novel infectious organisms such as retroviruses into the human population, thereby causing new pandemics with echos of HIV/AIDS.
- Complex species differences between non-human primates and human beings that render results useless.
- Serious doubts existing about the physiology and biochemical compatability of pig organs with the human body.
- The extensive use of higher primates in procedures that have caused very high levels of suffering.

Errors and Omissions in the Conduct of the Studies

A feature of the evidence contained in the acquired documents relates to the manner in which the studies were performed. On several occasions Imutran expressed dissatisfaction with the level of service provided by HLS, claiming in one instance that some studies exhibited "a fundamental shortfall in GLP compliance."

Other examples of incompetence and malpractice include:

- The illegal re-use of a group of monkeys took place at HLS.
- A vital blood sample was taken at completely the wrong time, thereby hindering attempts by Imutran to calculate the optimum dose of immunosuppressant drugs.
- Seven baboons were transplanted without crucial antibody reading being taken before the surgeries.

- A monkey died four days after being vivisected because a swab was left inside him that caused his spleen to go septic.
- In another accident, a piglet kidney due to be transplanted into a monkey was frozen and thus rendered useless, leading the monkey to be killed on the operating table.
- Principles of the Good Laboratory Practice were breached 520 times throughout the research program.
- The transgenic piglets killed for their organs in one study were supposed to weigh 2-3 kg. Only two out of 22 "donor" piglets fell into this range in one study.

Animal Suffering

The true extent of the suffering inflicted on higher primates is now revealed. Forty-nine wild caught baboons were killed in xenotransplantation experiments. The baboons used in these horrific experiments were just 2-4 years old – mere youngsters.

Lies

How many times have we seen quotes by HLS saying the animals at HLS are well cared for and that the staff "love and respect" the animals they mutilate and kill? Did the HLS staff "love and respect" the female monkey who was given a quadruple overdose and was found shaking and grinding her teeth and died the following day?

Did they "love and respect" the monkeys they observed screaming, reluctant to move, salivating, huddling, found dead, with severe tremors in the upper torso and head, suddenly collapsing, quiet and lethargic, with large open wounds, labored breathing, lying on cage floors? Of course they didn't! Yet more proof HLS are liars and care nothing for their victims.

More Suffering

The experiments involved wild-caught baboons, cynomoglus monkeys and thousands of piglets. The experiments were a complete failure. Piglet organs were grafted onto the primates' necks, into their abdomens and replaced their own healthy organs. Many primates died within 24 hours of surgery due to "technical failures."

Most primates died as a result of the following: infections, toxic effects of immunosupressant drugs, heart failure as a result of rejection, and heart failure for apparently inexplicable reasons.

Death in Transit

Three cynomoglus monkeys destined for xenotransplantation experiments at HLS died in transit from the Phillipines "due to a combination of factors" including the size of the crates, ventilation, females in heat and journey time. Basically the monkeys couldn't stand up properly or turn around for two days and suffocated to death. It was HLS's responsibility to import those monkeys and they failed miserably.

In Their Own Words!

"Unfortunately, I cannot refrain from expressing to you – on behalf of Imutran Ltd. our serious concerns in the light of the latest events recently occurring at HLS. Clearly this situation is unacceptable. Frankly I do not understand how this could occur as every single step in the procedures is double checked by a second person. I can only believe that the double check procedure is not in place or that it is not taken seriously by the people looking after Imutran's animals." - Dr. Emanuele Cozzi of Imutran to HLS in January of 1999.

Mike Kirkup of Imutran stated in a secret internal document that continuing to place work at HLS would mean that Imutran would have to "accept that the service from HLS will fall short of our expectations."

Mike Kirkup of Imutran sends an exasperated fax to HLS about the inability of HLS researchers to fulfill requirements for the experiments in terms of getting primate blood samples. "The situation continues to frustrate our laboratory staff. Weekday arrival times since October 7th have not improved since we last spoke about this topic – from 12 deliveries, we have received samples at 10am ONCE!"

Robert Harling from HLS apologizes profusely for all of their failures: "We would like t take this opportunity to apologize for the recent errors that have taken place at Huntingdon during the ongoing Xenotransplantation work. There can be no excuses that can be made for the failure of individuals to follow the operating procedures that have been set down to ensure the smooth conduct of studies. "

How Many More Times?

Huntingdon Life Sciences has been the subject of previou undercover investigations. These produced photographic, video, and documented evidenc of cruelty, illegal acts, suffering falsifying data and gross incompetence by HLS staff.

Animal Rights activists continue to expose HLS's cruelty and produce evidence that government appointed lab inspectorates never do because of their corrupt bias! We do not need any more evidence to convince us HLS is the worst of the worst. This investigation and four others just as damning have proven horrible science and sickening animal abuse.

If all of this is not enough to get the government and the 'authorities' to take definitive action to close this place down, then we must! The time is NOW! Let's smash

Stephens / Bank of America Partners in Pain Campaign

Not satisfied just destroying their investment in HLS, SHAC is determined to pressure Stephens on all of their business fronts to demonstrate that their one rotten apple (the HLS investment) will ruin the batch.

Across the west coast, those cities without a Stephens office or Bank of New York branch are being encouraged to tackle the Bank of America. The Bank of America has it's entire mutual fund program run through the controversial investment firm Stephens Inc. Stephens Inc. provides to the Bank of America mutual fund legal consultation, state reporting, research, management, and sales of mutual fund programs. Insiders within the Bank of America have reported that Stephens handles as much as 160 billion dollars in resources for the companies they manage through the bank. In return the bank provides Stephens Inc. with office space, resources, employees, and customers.

The Bank of America's duplicitous and profitable business relationship with Stephens Inc. provides the Little Rock based company with capital and business credibility that have allowed it to save from financial ruin on January 29th 2001, the notorious animal testing lab Huntingdon Life Sciences.

Being connected to Stephens shows their implicit support for animal cruelty. SHAC representatives have sent an informative letter to BofA management and placed several phone calls in order to have a dialogue about how they legitimize investing in animal cruelty by connecting themselves to such a shady company like Stephens Inc. So far, we have received no reply.

By targeting the Bank of America we can bring the campaign against Stephens and HLS back to the public. Main street campaigns such as this get HLS name recognition in the community, one synonymous with animal cruelty. We can use pickets and publicity events against the Bank of America to inform the public about HLS and what they can do to help us close them down!

Across the west coast on August 20th, demonstrations will take place outside of The Bank of America. There will be a press conference in Charlotte outside the Corporate HQ for BofA, and in San Francisco activists will burn a giant credit card in effigy. Check www.shacusa.net for the full story and updates.

You Can Help!

If you live in a city without a Stephens office or Bank of New York branch, contact SHAC and we will send you a Bank of America Action Pack. We will send you HLS leaflets, Bank of America leaflets, special anti-Stephens stickers, and press packs!

Consistent Pressure!

At almost every Stephens office in America there are regular demonstrations against them because of their investment in animal cruelty. Throughout the end of July and the early weeks of August several major cities planned Stephens Action weeks. Grassroots groups around the country held protests, disruptions, phone/e-mail/fax blockades and home demos to protest Stephens' involvement with HLS (see pages 6-7 for details).

SHAC has learned that Stephens recently purchased a giant pro-vivisection poster stating "thanks to animal research they'll be able to protest 20.8 years longer" with a picture of an animal rights demonstration. It was reported that they plan to hang it in a well traveled, employee area of their Little Rock Headquarters.

Furthermore, we were told that employees have been blocked from visiting any of SHAC's websites from their work computers. What don't they want their employees to know about the horrors taking place at HLS? Why don't they want their employees to learn the truth?

Almost 100,000 leaflets have been handed out nationally detailing Stephens' filthy relationship with HLS and no matter where you go in most major cities you encounter anti-Stephens Inc. stickers. Let's up the ante and increase the pressure. This campaign is more than just getting Stephens to divest, it's about making an example out of them to the rest of the financial community. If you invest in animal cruelty, you answer to us!

Here Come the Men in Black!

SHAC activists in Chicago have captured the attention of a private investigative firm, no doubt hired by Stephens, called Global Options (www.globalops.com). This company consists of ex-FBI agents and CIA operatives that now contract out their services to companies that engage in espionage and subversion. According to their web site they "start where the police leave off." They lurk about demonstrations in their SUVs with tinted windows attempting to be inconspicuous.

The FBI and the 'Joint Terrorism Task Force' has also taken a minor interest in this campaign. They have been at several demonstrations, have attempted to talk to activists that have been arrested, and even at one point paid a friendly visit to the home of a SHAC volunteer.

Now although this certainly does give the campaign another interesting element, it's important to note their presence means nothing, and should never deter us from fighting for the animals. The police and the FBI are not our enemies. One would even hope they may feel silly or resentful having to monitor people who care about animals when there are real criminals on the streets committing rape, burglary, and murder. Although they may attempt to intimidate us or get in our way, we must remember they are simply tools of a greater power. HLS is the focus and we must keep our eyes on the prize: getting this vile place shut down for good!

Legal Update

HLS and Stephens: You can sooner ride a bicycle to the moon than collect one penny from SHAC!

HLS and Stephens Inc. recently amended their RICO lawsuit against SHAC and the Animal Defense League by adding more defendants and alleging a global conspiracy to shut down their company.

These paranoid conspiracy theorists are trying to make a case that the animal rights movement internationally is a criminal enterprise that has plotted to close HLS by means of coercion, extortion, threats, physical violence, arson, theft, and harassment. The claims are absurd and there exists no evidence that any named individual or organization being sued took part in any of these activities or anything illegal at all.

SHAC makes no secret about supporting direct action, but we also make it very clear that SHAC is a legal campaign and does not engage in breaking the law. This lawsuit means nothing to us as we will prove victorious and the legal fees incurred by HLS will further jeopardize their shaky future. This lawsuit should make all of us more determined than ever to double our efforts to close HLS and to show to all other animal abusers that petty and harassing litigation will NEVER deter us from fighting for the animals.

From the RICO lawsuit SHAC has learned that HLS is crediting the anti-HLS campaign with over 2.5 million dollars in damage and Stephens in claiming over 7 million dollars in damages to their business and investments. The biggest expense attributed (by HLS) was the loss of a major contract from RW Johnson which was worth $2,273,000 and over 12 million dollars in lost revenue. Ah, what a shame!

Please donate as generously as you can to SHAC's legal fund to fight these frivolous lawsuits as well as to help defend those wrongfully arrested during demonstrations. Earmark "for SHAC legal" and send to:

Feedback

"I have recently joined your email list. I must thank you for sending the updates to the financial damage done to HLS and the investors. It helps to know that the protesting is doing some good. I also applaud you for undertaking such a large project in support of animal welfare. Just had to let you know. Keep up the great work!"

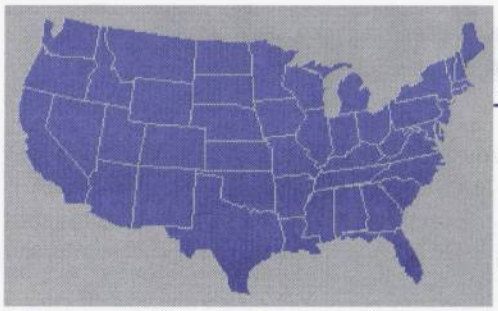

"I called that 800# before 5 p.m. yesterday - no answer - just rang about 20 times, also tried this morning before 9 a.m., same thing, but finally success later this morning. The woman I spoke with sounded kind of frazzled and claimed that her company is just fine - they don't do anything wrong. I asked her how it feels to work for a company that funds the deaths of 500 animals a day? Silence (I thought she had hung up). I said, "Hello?" She answered, "Yes". I told her she should ask her manager or someone in charge to explain why they fund this horrific place called Huntingdon Life Sciences. Again, she tried to say that her company was good, but I could tell that she was shaken up. I will be calling again later!"

"Keep up all your good work- we will win this!!!!"

"Thank you for the footage you sent me. It is with great excitement I write to let you know that the show on HLS and vivisection is going to be aired either this sun or next Sunday, on one of the, if not the biggest live documentary shows in South Africa, the day after I will be also a studio guest on the biggest talk show in SA, and all because of you and your wonderful members getting hard evidence. Thank you from the bottom of my heart for helping me to do this. Love and light to you and your organization."

"You guys are great - keep up the great work, you are true heroes to those animals imprisoned in that awful, awful place! Thanks so much!

"Just want to let you know that my daughter and I spent Thursday and Friday e-mailing the list of stephens.com addresses you provided. We kept this up throughout both nights and are doing the same thing tonight. Wish I could have been at the HLS demonstration, but am stuck here. Will gladly keep filling up Stephens' e-mail boxes!"

Direct Action

Who's the real terrorist?

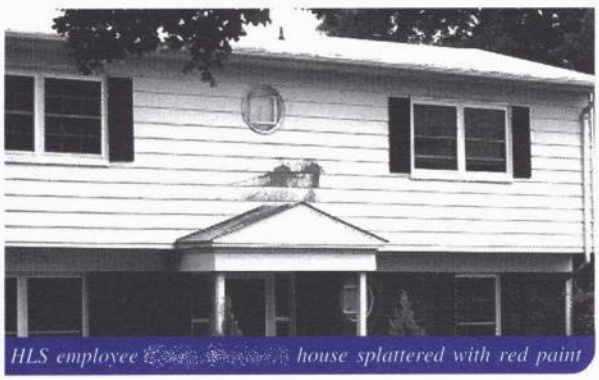

To often in the media, and from HLS themselves, the public is presented with a picture of some poor victimized vivisector who has received angry phone calls or has had a window broken. Buzzwords and labels are so casually thrown about stigmatizing anyone who cares about animals, like eco-terrorists, zealots, fanatics, and vandals. Seldom in the corporate media does one hear about what happens to the animals that drives people to take this sort of direct action.

The pharmaceutical industry, of which HLS is part of, is a $133 billion dollar a year business. This kind of money buys a lot of political clout and biased media attention and it is by no surprise the public hears little about the plight of the animals and the futility of the research.

Make no mistake though, there is no comparison between what the animals in HLS face on a day to day basis and what righteously is visited upon their tormentors. The next time the ALF strikes back at HLS and it's allies, in defense of the animals, ask yourself who the real terrorist is. Is it the 28 year old woman from England who was sentenced to 6 months in jail for sending a threatening letter to HLS, or is it the HLS worker in NJ that cut out a beagle puppy's heart and sent it to his girlfriend for valentines day? Who are the real criminals? Those who risked their lives and freedom breaking into HLS to save 14 puppies from a life of torture and a certain death, or those at HLS captured on videotape beating, laughing at and taunting obviously distressed animals?

Direct action has played a crucial role in almost every major social movement. From the civil rights movement to women's rights to labor rights to the anti-apartheid movement, concerned and compassionate citizens have recognized the necessity and expiedency of which direct action achieves their objectives. The people that take direct action are normal members of the community who's conscience will not let them sit idly by while such gross injustices are perpetrated daily. Those that broke into the lab and rescued the puppies and those that have employed economic sabotage against HLS and it's allies are no different than Harriet Tubman and those in the underground railroad, and history will regard them the same, as heroes!

The July 13th demonstration against HLS that saw 28 non-violent activists arrested and imprisoned sends a very clear message that our civil liberties are under attack. HLS and it's allies can expect an increase in the amount of direct action as a result of this. The more our rights are stifled and the more repression aboveground activists face, the more incited people are to take action themselves to shut down HLS in every way possible. HLS is digging its own grave!

The below communiqués and action summaries were all sent to SHAC anonymously. Although SHAC fully supports and welcomes ALF actions, we cannot endorse or partake in them. SHAC runs an all-legal campaign. Please read the below and be inspired! And to those at HLS and Stephens reading this article, salivating at the prospect of including it in another lawsuit, let the below be a very clear indicator for you, that you can sue SHAC and other legal entities until you are blue in the face, but you will NEVER be able to stop the A.L.F!

SO STICK THAT IN YOUR RICO PIPE AND SMOKE IT!

In the wee hours of Tuesday, July 24th, we paid a visit to the home of Brian G Rogan President of Capital Markets to The Bank of New York [redacted] 20 holes were drilled in the right side of his 30 foot yacht, and one 6-inch by 6-inch hole was sawed through the right hull.

Various workings of the boat were also tampered with. As the boat began to take on water it was cut loose and pushed out to sea... Both the boat and his personal dock were left covered with painted slogans denouncing BNY's involvement with Huntingdon Life Sciences, the largest reading money means nothing- life Means everything.

We received annonymous word that the rear car window of the Vice President of Analytical Services for Huntingdon Life Sciences, Darioush "Dari" Dadgar [redacted] was smashed out in his driveway on June 8, 2001.

May 17th 2001: The Seattle office of Stephen's Inc was evacuated, as well as three other floors, after a major stink bomb was released. The police and emergency biohazard team cleared five city blocks, jamming up traffic for miles, and checked each person exiting the building. Stephens Inc. = Stephens Stink!

Direct action via the internet has been hitting HLS opponents hard in the last few months. Several companies connected to HLS like, Ribena, Primate Products, and Goldman Sachs have all had their websites hacked and 'redecorated' at one point or another. Other companies like Stephens, Shell, Yamanouchi, and HLS themselves have been subject to e-mail attacks where employees have received as many as 15,000 e-mails in a day.

Check daily as we will strive to keep you up to date on the direct action element of this campaign. Also visit

Hit 'em hard!

October 27 - 29

On October 27th - 29th 2001, animal rights activists from across the world will descend upon Little Rock, Arkansas for what will be one of the biggest and most important demonstrations in the history of the animal rights movement. The actions and events during the last weekend of October will seal the fate of Huntingdon Life Sciences as a company that is dead in the water.

Participation from every animal rights supporter in the country is required if we are to show the Little Rock based Stephens Inc. that we are a powerful voice for the animals suffering inside of HLS, and that we will smash their bloody investment if they don't listen to reason.

Prepare for Little Rock!

There is a lot to be done to get all of us to Little Rock! Here are a few suggestions to prepare:

- Contact SHAC USA if you need a ride or can offer a ride to Little Rock, so we can help you organize effective and efficient carpools.
- Advertise for the events and carpools in your local newsletters, tabling events and meetings.
- Fundraise to make it easier for your group to attend the events. Some sucessful ideas are benefits, bake sales, garage sales and phone canvassing. Make sure you can get to Little Rock!

Can't make it?

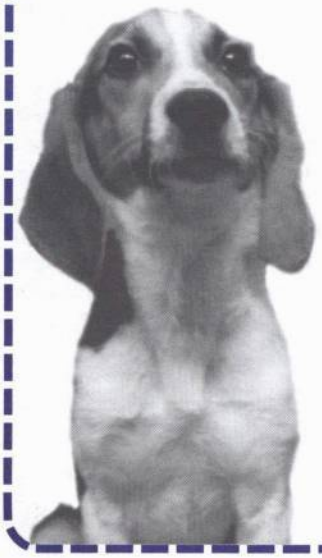

Even if you can't make it to Little Rock, you can still play an effective role in the actions to shut down HLS!

- Participate personally or do a fundraiser in your area to join our sponsor an activist program.
- Plan a protest against your local Stephens on October 29th!
- Keep the pressure on Stephens Inc. and HLS by participating in various actions in your area or doing an action yourself. SHAC is able to provide you with the literature, stickers and action packs to make this happen.
- Regularly visit www.shacusa.net, www.stephenskills.com and most importantly, www.october29.org.
- Phone, e-mail, fax Stephens! (see What You Can Do insert).

Remember, 500 animals a day are being poisoned to death inside of Huntingdon Life Sciences and Stephens Inc. is directly responsible for this torture. It is up to us to work as hard as we can to stop this senseless killing - on October 27 - 29th, we have an opportunity to do this - so hit 'em hard!
