EDITORIAL

Welcome! - to the fourth issue of the Stop Huntingdon Animal Cruelty USA Newsletter. Now more than ever the campaign to close Huntingdon Life Sciences is in full swing - moving ahead with unprecedented fervor and intensity, with HLS on a collision course leading directly to financial ruin.

Since the last newsletter we've seen victory after victory, spelling a sad (and short) future for HLS. HLS's third largest investor, Oracle Partners, L.P., holding 23 million shares (or approximately 8% of the company) has announced that it is withdrawing its investment from the lab [see page 8]. In only eight weeks, SHAC and our supporters have successfully driven every single one of HLS's U.S. market makers to sever their ties with the lab. As a result, HLS was kicked off the Over the Counter Bulletin Board (a stock exchange already reserved for failing businesses).

Perhaps the most significant victory to date, and the one most indicative of our success, was HLS's announcement that it will be moving its finances to the U.S. [see page 9], a move HLS Managing Director Brian Cass admitted in May 2000, in the Huntingdon and St. Ives Crier, would mean SHAC had "effectively won". This is a last, desperate attempt on the part of HLS to save itself from foreclosure. It comes only nine months after Stephens Inc. saved the lab from bankruptcy by extending them a $33 million dollar loan that was supposed to insure its financial safety for six years.

This newsletter also comes on the heels of the most significant and inspiring event of the HLS campaign to date [see page 3]. On October 27-29, over 300 activists converged in Little Rock, Arkansas for three days of action against HLS's largest investor and primary financier, Stephens Inc. After a town meeting and activist workshops, protesters took to the streets protesting the homes and headquarters of Stephens Inc. and it's executives. Activists literally shut down downtown Little Rock marching through the streets and brought business in the area to a halt. All eyes were on Stephens Inc. and their bloody investment as the media splashed the company's name all over Little Rock coupled with the images and tales of puppies being punched in the face, animals dying by the hands of inept workers, and countless instances of HLS's scientific fumblings.

It is clear now more than ever that Stephens Inc., and the decision makers within this company, are the target. If Warren Stephens and his band of lackeys think they can get away with paying HLS to torture animals and make people sick with its false science, we must show them they are very wrong. HLS has been exposed twice since Stephens made its investment in 1997 revealing the same animal cruelty, the same sloppy science and the same incompetent workers. Oracle Partners cited the complete absence of progress in the ethical and financial situation at HLS as the chief reason for withdrawing its investment. If the above are not reason enough for Stephens to divest, then we must conclude they are unwilling to listen to reason and will have to be dealt with otherwise.

The target is in focus, the course is clear, IT'S TIME FOR ACTION!! Those animals inside HLS need YOU! SHAC-USA is ready and willing to be an information clearinghouse and resource center to help you with your efforts to close HLS. But we cannot do it alone! We need everyone's help in order to give Stephens a reason to pull out of HLS. No one can do everything, but EVERYONE CAN DO SOMETHING TO CLOSE HLS. Do your part, do more than your part, do what is and is not comfortable - do whatever is necessary to close HLS!! And when you read the next list of victories, know that you achieved them. Every day earlier that we close this lab, 500 animals will be saved. There is no time to waste - why are you still sitting there reading?

don't wait for someone else to Smash HLS!

O29: Business as Usual?

On October 29, 2001 animal rights activists from around the country and around the world descended on Stephens Inc.'s headquarters in Little Rock, Arkansas and made history. Here's the wrap up.....

Saturday, October 27

Animal rights activists and members of the Little Rock community attended a Town Meeting addressing Stephens Inc.'s investment in Huntingdon Life Sciences and how Little Rock residents could take action against this blight in their own backyards.

Speakers included Dr. Rich McLellan, a Board Certified Emergency Medicine Physician and representative of the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine, who denounced animal research on scientific grounds; Tom Regan, University Alumni Distinguished Professor of Philosophy at North Carolina State University who spoke on the philosophy of animal rights; and Kevin Jonas from SHAC-USA, an animal rights activist who's been with the HLS campaign since its inception in November 1999 as he spent a year in England working with one of the world's most effective and furious anti-vivisection campaign organizations, SHAC-UK.

The afternoon's premiere speaker was Michelle Rokke, a former undercover investigator for People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals who worked inside HLS from October 1996 to May of 1997. Her stories of horrific animal cruelty and scientific fraud from inside the lab, coupled with the undercover video footage she took, drove home the dire situation at HLS and reminded us all what we are fighting for and why we cannot and will not lose!

Following the Town Meeting, SHAC-USA held activist workshops. In a more interactive setting, activists discussed experiences, tactics and ideas to take home and destroy Stephens's investment in their own area. Workshops on civil disobedience, direct action, undercover investigations, police repression and government harassment were held. Chris DeRose, president of Last Chance for Animals, spoke on his experience as an animal rights activist for 20 years and a legal team led a workshop in preparation for the protest on October 29.

Attendees also picked up campaign resource materials, including "Diary of Despair," a collection of the diaries Michelle Rokke kept during her time inside HLS. The workshops ended with a showing of the UK and US HLS campaign videos - documentaries capturing the fury of the HLS campaign thus far and inciting that fury to continue until that vile lab is closed for good!

Sunday, October 28

The day began with a vegan BBQ hosted by the Society for a Peaceful Coexistence where activists who'd traveled from all over the country came together to socialize and form regional coalitions that will unify the movement and pound HLS that much harder. Media was present throughout the day and SHAC members did interviews with national radio shows, local news stations and HBO.

Over 150 activists were fired up for the "Parade of Homes" that followed the BBQ as they marched through Warren Stephens's neighborhood, visiting Warren's home and the home of Michael R. Smith, Warren's neighbor and soon to be promoted Executive Vice President.

Neighbors filled their front lawns and the media captured the fury of these activists who vowed that as long as those animals inside HLS don't get to check out for the weekend, neither will the hot shots at Stephens Inc. The home demonstrations were a mere glimpse into what was to come on Monday, October 29 - D-day for Stephens Inc.

Monday, October 29

Finally, the day we'd all been waiting for. Over 300 activists converged at the headquarters of Stephens Inc. in downtown Little Rock for a massive demonstration at their doorstep, For days prior we'd heard Warren Stephens vowing it would be "business as usual" on October 29 and the police claiming they were "ready for anything".

Actions, however, speak louder than words as Stephens Inc. worked furiously to get SHAC to settle the RICO lawsuit [see

p. 11] they've been handed before October 29 so that restrictions on demonstration behavior could be enforced. When SHAC told Stephens to take a hike, that we were not settling and would fight the lawsuit, Stephens and their disproportionate political hold on the city of Little Rock, bought and sold a blatantly unconstitutional ordinance placing stipulations on protests in the city.

Passed in one night without an opportunity for public comment, the ordinance required that organizations sponsoring demonstrations pay $25 to apply for a permit, provide adequate sanitation, parking, etc., and stay in a designated "protest zone".

Upon arrival, activists were searched before entering the protest zone and those with gas masks, to protect themselves from tear gas and pepper spray often used by overzealous police, were denied entry. Refusing to be caged like the animals we are fighting for, the protest quickly turned into a march around downtown Little Rock as protesters refused to enter or remain inside the protest zone. The police quickly realized they were not "ready for anything."

They stood there in disbelief as we literally took over the city - streets were for protesters, not cars; local businesses closed down as streets and sidewalks became wall to wall protesters; and downtown business men/ women left their offices to view the spectacle outside. It was not "business as usual" by any stretch of the imagination as employees inside the Stephens building remained glued to the windows watching the activists below.

Returning to the Stephens building, activists lead impassioned chants and speak-outs as the crowd let forth its anger over Stephens's vocal and fiscal support of a company that kills 180,000 animals every year testing agrochemicals and household products. Soon the barricades, designed to contain the protesters but now holding the police, came down.

Over and over in this campaign we have seen people refuse to sit idly by while HLS poisons and kills helpless animals; likewise, the attendees of Monday's events refused to let metal barricades keep them from the Stephens building. The police, who, just days before had been "ready for anything," reacted with unnecessary violence towards the protesters firing rubber bullets, tear gas and concussion grenades into the crowd. Ten protesters were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct, obstruction of governmental operations and violation of a city ordinance.

Always one step ahead of the police and Stephens, and never deterred by arrests, the protest again marched around the Stephens building and headed for the Bank of America - a move entirely unexpected by the police who were "ready for anything."

Beating the police to the building activists protested the Bank of America's business relationship with Stephens, encouraging the bank to sever ties with Stephens and send a clear message that they are unwilling to do business with companies who fund animal torture.

The protest rounded up in the back of the Stephens building at the parking garage exit as protesters informed dozens of employees, peering down over the ledges, of their company's investment in animal cruelty. In one last show of brute and unthinking force, police on horses charged into the crowd arresting those they suspected as leaders.

Numerous activists received injuries and one person's wrist was broken by police as they carried her away.

All in all it was an exciting, effective demonstration, sending home a very clear message to Warren Stephens that it will NOT be business as usual as long as Stephens continues to fund animal torture!

Jail Support/Follow Up

Following Monday's event, the protesters moved to the jail where their comrades were being held. All of the arrestees were released Monday night but their freedom was short-lived as the judge threw them all back into jail after they plead "not guilty" at arraignment Tuesday morning.

A jail support camp was set up outside the jail and remained until all but one of the protesters were released Thursday afternoon. One female remained in custody to serve a 10 day sentence for Contempt of Court.

Media coverage continued with press conferences and events refuting Warren's claims that HLS is a sound, ethical company and denouncements of the police brutality that erupted downtown. Civil suits will be in order for those protesters who were injured by the Robocops on site Monday.

While their fellow activists remained in jail, those who stayed in Little Rock were sure not to forget the reason they came - 500 animals died each day we were there and we were determined to do something about it.

A protest was held at the Bank of America in North Little Rock Wednesday, conveniently avoiding the Stephens-sponsored ordinance in Little Rock. Later that night, Halloween, a candlelight vigil was held at Warren Stephens's home in remembrance of the animals who die at HLS every day. It was then that we fully understood just how effective this weekend of action had been.

While walking to Warren's home, 16 protesters were surrounded by 12 cop cars, dozens of uniformed and non-uniformed officers and a helicopter followed overhead. The activists were detained, illegally searched and told they could not continue with their event. When the police were done with their ordeal, activists questioned the commanding officer on video about the notion of continuing their event.

They confronted the police about their constitutional right to engage in a vigil outside Warren's home and were told that according to the ordinance, it was too late to do so. Always more familiar with the law than the police, the protesters pulled out the ordinance and showed that they were in fact well within the prescribed times in which home demos were permitted. Forced to acknowledge their wrong, the officers had no choice but to allow the protesters to continue.

Sixteen activists bearing candles and signs were met with an image reminiscent of Fort Knox at Warren's home. Dozens of police vehicles and officers blocked the driveway and the yard, and a helicopter with a searchlight followed our every move. It seems we've had an effect when a candlelight vigil warrants the money and protection Warren feels he needs from the animal rights movement. I guess it's a valid concern when you've pissed off thousands of people around the world by funding animal torture. Clearly, every time action is taken in the campaign to close HLS, we hit the abusers in their pockets, forcing them to pay for heightened security for something as peaceful as a candlelight vigil.

Meanwhile, reports started to come in from around the world. October 29 was a global day of action and an amazing few days of action were held all over the world including Argentina, Australia, Austria, the Czech Republic, England, Germany, Holland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Jersey, South Africa, Sweden, Switzerland and many more. Check out www.shac.net and scroll down to 10/31/01 Demo Roundup for a report.

Media/Photos/Video

Media for this weekend was better than anything we could have expected. For weeks, and just about every day, before the demonstration, local media covered the upcoming events. They were present from the moment the Town Meeting started through until the last activists left Little Rock, vowing to return.

Video footage from inside HLS was shown - beagle puppies being punched in the face with a note that Stephens Inc. is the largest investor in this lab. Following Monday's demo, media reached as far as The New York Times, the Boston Globe, CNN, L.A., Chicago, Portland and elsewhere.

SPECIAL REQUEST: if you have hard or electronic copies of any media, if you have any video or still images, send them to SHAC USA!! You can e-mail them to shacusa@envirolink.org or mail them to: P.O. Box 22398, Philadelphia, PA, 19110. Then, wait for an online scrapbook that will be up soon!

Lastly

And so this tirade comes to an end.... but let us make certain that this is the BEGINNING of the pressure Stephens Inc. will feel until they pull out of HLS. Let the energy we all felt this weekend flow into constant, consistent pressure from here on out. [see last page and back cover for info on upcoming events!].

THANK YOU to every single person who came out and/or financially contributed to make the weekend of action a success! We could not have done it without you! The energy, motivation and commitment witnessed in Little Rock sent ripples of inspiration around the world.

Huntingdon Life Sciences is on its last leg and Stephens is teetering and cowering in the face of activists who vow to be in their offices, on their phones, at their doorsteps and at the offices of their most significant business affiliates until they sever their ties with HLS.

It would be criminal not to up the ante now. Take everything you felt this weekend - outrage at the deaths of 500 animals every day, the drive to end it, and assurance that we will do so - bring it home and smash Stephens's bloody investment in your own community. SHAC-USA is ready and willing to be a resource center and information clearinghouse to help you in any way we can. For the 500 animals who die every day at HLS, there is no time to waste!!

Last, but certainly not least, we must give credit where credit is due. As mentioned above, this weekend was amazing in terms of media coverage. We could not have done it without the help of Mr. Warren Stephens himself - running full page ads denouncing our events and our campaign, calling last minute press conferences, pushing an unconstitutional ordinance that deterred no one but got civil rights advocates and the media all riled up.

SHAC USA sent this care package (including thank you card - text below, t-shirt, etc.) to Warren to thank him for making October 29 a success and for showing himself as the buffoon that he is in his own community.....

Business as Usual?

What can we say? We simply couldn't have done this without you! The ordinance, the police violence, the media attention - lets face it, you did this to yourself! Thanks to you we educated the public and your employees who were invited to our "secret meeting", we showed beagles being punched in the face (by the company you support) on the 6 o'clock news, and we showed police shooting kids in the face with rubber bullets on your front doorstep to the nation - with coverage on CNN, USA Today, Wall Street Journal, New York Times, Financial Times and more. All the while you embarassing yourself with your pathetic PhD ads and your blatant lies that everyone could see through.

pssst - come a little closer, we have a secret for you - we're winning.

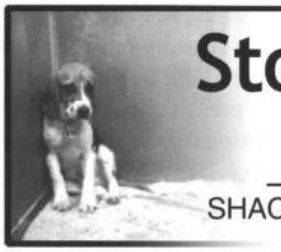

See you soon - we liked Little Rock so much that we're coming back!

-SHAC USA

If anyone would like to express their thanks for Warren's help in making the weekend a success: Warren Stephens; 1 [redacted] (Send us copies of your cards/letters and maybe they'll make an appearance on our website or in a future newsletter!)

SHAC-USA Challenges Stephens Inc. to Debate Scientific Validity of Vivisection

SHAC-USA has delivered an official challenge to Stephens Inc. to debate the scientific validity of animal research in a public forum. A letter was delivered via certified mail to Warren Stephens's office and home, as well as the office of Stephens's Vice President for Public Affairs, Frank Thomas.

Little Rock, AR 72207

November 19, 2001

Dear Mr. Stephens,

Stop Huntingdon Animal Cruelty USA (SHAC-USA) was surprised by statements made at your press conference October 29th during our events in Little Rock. At one point you alleged that SHAC-USA was unwilling to debate the scientific issues of animal research, including the testing at Huntingdon Life Sciences (HLS), because we "know [we] can't win."

Members of SHAC-UK and SHAC-USA met with Stephens Inc. Vice President for Public Affairs, Frank Thomas, and your company's lawyer, Kim Keller, at Keller's firm, Skadden Arps Slate Meagher, at 4 Times Square in Manhattan on January 26th, 2001. In that meeting, SHAC offered to arrange meetings for Stephens Inc. with scientists and doctors who oppose animal research on scientific grounds to discuss HLS's research from a scientific perspective. The aim of this offer was to demonstrate to Stephens Inc. that the research conducted at HLS does not benefit humans and, in fact, is harmful to them. The Stephens representatives declined the offer. This offer still stands.

Likewise, SHAC-USA contacted the Partnership For Hope and Discovery (PHD), the pro-animal research organization Stephens Inc. admits having close ties to, offering to participate in a scientific debate over animal research. We spoke with Dominic DelPapa, who informed us he would call us back with PHD's decision. We never received a call back. This offer also still stands.

Furthermore, M.D.s from the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine (PCRM), a researcher organization comprised of physicians, have written extensive critiques of specific experiments previously or currently being conducted at HLS. The critiques are enclosed.

SHAC-USA is eager and willing to debate the scientific validity of animal research. We feel very strongly that animal research provides results that cannot be extrapolated between species, and hence the practice has led, and continues to lead, to disastrous complications and harm to humans. We would be happy to arrange a public venue in which to debate the issue.

SHAC-USA challenges Stephens Inc. to debate the scientific arguments for and against vivisection in a public forum. We are more than happy to arrange for scientists to travel to Little Rock to debate a Stephens representative or a scientist speaking on the company's behalf. We will be holding a second town forum as part of a weekend of action in Little Rock January 13th - 14th, 2002 and will have a scientist there ready and willing to debate. If Stephens chooses not to accept this offer, we will continue with plans to present the scientific arguments against animal research to the attendees of the meeting.

We are confident that, if Stephens Inc. feels it has a sound, scientific and defensible argument in favor of animal testing, you will accept our challenge to debate and provide representatives to present that position in a public forum. Please contact us at your earliest convenience to inform us whether you will accept our challenge or not. If you choose not to accept, we will assume that it is in fact Stephens Inc. that is unwilling to debate because "they know they can't win."

Sincerely,
SHAC-USA

"What is required to extract biological data from unwilling, frightened, and highly stressed 'laboratory' animals should be prohibited. The cost of the data is unimaginable cruelty, and the data are usually unreliable because of physiological impairments of the animals and differences between them and animals."

- Dr. Murray Cohen of the Medical Research Modernization Committee

Hope and Suffering

by Michelle Rokke

There once was a beagle who lived in a lab.

The end of the 28 day oral gavage test.

I sit here and I wonder if they're dead. So bouncy. So full of life. Just babies - seven months old. Happy? Well, they could be happy. All so eager to please, waiting to be loved. I close my eyes and I see row after row of cages, each holding uniquely different, soft wrinkled puppies staring hopefully at a single door in a dank, barren room.

Each time that cage door opened they came to expect pain. Maybe they came to accept it. But still they waited. The anticipation on their little faces when I walked in. The dancing, barking, joyous excitement of seeing someone — anyone — anything other than cement and stainless steel. All anxious to be the one singled out for attention. But once the cage door opened they came to learn hesitancy. They learned mistrust of their human caretakers, but still they hoped. I know they did.

One at a time, I picked up each of those reluctant hesitant pups, and when I held them in my arms I could feel their hearts pound as they pressed their bodies into mine, could feel their wet noses in my neck as they snuggled closer — to smell — to feel — to know human skin and human smells — something other than rubber and tyvex and plastic. A smell other than alcohol. A sensation other than pain.

And when I delivered them safely to the exercise pen to play and romp with one of their own for those few precious minutes each week, oh how they danced. They ran circles of joy in the tiny cage and yipped with pleasure. A single, seldom-known moment of bliss within a product testing lab.

And when I took them back to their now-clean steel cell, again they pressed close — for comfort and warmth. Heads twisting backwards to touch my cheek, not wanting to be returned to the cold misery of isolation. Sometimes pressing back so hard they stumbled when their feet touched the cage floor. Forced to live for this moment with their noses nestled into a warm human neck. Forgetting for a few minutes the daily ritual when rubber tubes are jammed down their throats and the poison, someday to be called an over-the-counter drug, is pumped in.

These young dogs keep an unfailing hopefulness that the confinement, the daily toxic dosing followed by hours of illness are but a window in time — a hurdle that must be crossed before they can settle into a happy life with a kind family and maybe a blanket of their own. They sit. And they wait. And they hope and they suffer.

Taken from their cage one last time. Held down for one last needle. Darkness closes in. The dream of feeling soft grass underfoot fades. And then there is nothing....

The Sweet Smell of Success!

HLS's Third-Largest Investor Pulls the Plug

A Tale of Two Companies: Stephens Inc. and Oracle Partners - and Their Very, Very Different Definition of an Ethical Investment

Laying the Groundwork for Suffering.

In 1997, unbeknownst to one another, two undercover investigators infiltrated HLS. In the UK, Zoe Broughton, an investigator for Channel 4, filmed puppies sitting in their own congealed blood, researchers using dogs so young they couldn't find the veins, and employees violently punching four-month-old beagles.

Meanwhile, in the US, Michelle Rokke filmed workers dissecting a live monkey. In another incident, a technician, holding a dog in mid-air, administering a Tuberculin test into the animal's eyelid, was asked by Michelle if the procedure was being done correctly. He replied, "Nope, not supposed to, never saw it, never did it, can't prove it."

When the 1997 investigations hit the media, it was a public relations nightmare for HLS and anyone connected to them. HLS's share price hit record lows and many of HLS's clients vowed never to touch the lab again. In a desperate attempt to save itself from what seemed like certain death, HLS implemented a new management team - Brian Cass and Andrew Baker - to turn the company around.

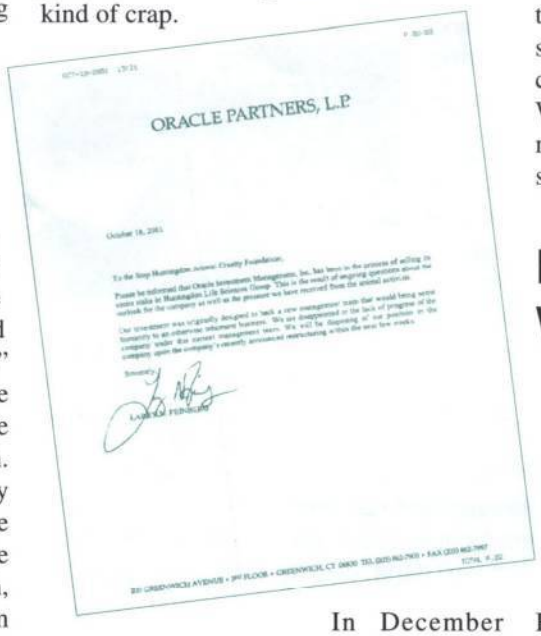

Cass and Baker promised in two years they'd have HLS out of the financial red, secure customer confidence, and render instances of animal abuse a thing of the past (ironic when HLS's entire business is forcing animals to inhale, ingest and otherwise endure chemicals and/or cutting them up).

At this point Stephens and Oracle chose to invest in HLS. Their expectations, of course, were that Cass and Baker would succeed and HLS would ultimately be a fruitful investment as the share price rose from record lows to those of a profitable company.

HLS Exposed TWICE since Stephens Invested!!

However, three years later HLS was exposed yet again - twice. In the fall of 2000, internal documents concerning a top secret xenotransplantation study contracted by Novartis were released. These documents showed over 520 violations of Good Laboratory Practice laws (GLPs).

A monkey died four days after an operation because a swab was left inside him. On another occasion, workers cut open a monkey only to discover they'd forgotten to thaw the piglet heart that was to be transplanted. The monkey was killed. The documents released were so damning that Novartis moved to the US, where they perceived a more hospitable climate for this kind of crap.

ORACLE PARTNERS, L.P

In December 2000 an activist entered HLS on numerous occasions and documented the following: a monkey escaping, employee drunkenness and drug-taking onsite, high absenteeism, low staff morale, animal suffering, and safety regulations being flouted. The activist also obtained detailed information regarding HLS's clients, including Monsanto, Glaxo Wellcome, Du Pont, British Biotech and numerous others.

Documents also showed a staggering 41 deficiencies of the GLPs. Clearly Cass and Baker have not upheld their vows. Sloppy science, worker incompetence, and animal cruelty are anything but a thing of the past.

What Oracle Sees, Stephens Denies.

On October 18, after a brief but hard-hitting campaign against Oracle Partners, SHAC received a faxed statement from the company that it would be divesting its entire $23 million stake in HLS. It cited Cass and Baker's failure to turn HLS around as one of the chief reasons for divestment.

We've seen Warren Stephens all over the media lying that Stephens Inc. invested after the investigations at HLS, how he believes that HLS is a sound investment. How then can he account for the vast disparity between his perspective and that of HLS's (former) third-largest investor?

We applaud Oracle for promptly divesting after recognizing its hand in suffering. Clearly Warren is not concerned about ethical investments. He doesn't care about the animals at HLS or the people who will suffer due to HLS's inept "science." He cares about two things: ego and money. Well Warren, you're never going to make any money investing in HLS, so get over yourself and pull out before it gets any worse!!

HLS: Up a Creek Without a Market Maker

Eight for eight, the campaign to close HLS has knocked out every US market maker in two months. Market makers match up buyers to sellers in order to maintain trade in a company, such as HLS. HLS's market makers kept them on the pitiful Over The Counter Bulletin Board (OTCBB), a stock exchange reserved for failing companies.

However, after animal rights activists forced every market maker to quit HLS, they were kicked off the OTCBB and forced to trade on Pink Sheets. You wanna sell? Find yourself a buyer. You wanna buy? Find yourself a seller - because no company is going to be foolish enough to play that role with HLS and do it for you.

Additionally, this further hindered HLS's plans to become US-listed as they must now find a company willing to act as a market maker before that transaction can occur.

But - Be Ready!!

SHAC has sent letters to every potential market maker on the OTCBB. We've detailed what goes on inside HLS, noted that every HLS market maker was a target and that every company caved under the pressure of our campaign, and warning the same fate for any company who chooses to follow the same senseless path.

In the event that this does occur, be ready - ready to visit the fury of this campaign upon anyone brazen enough to cross its path. Be ready and treat new market makers as you've treated those that have been left in our wake - with no mercy.

They've been forewarned. Any assistance provided to HLS is done so with full knowledge of the consequences. Let those consequences be quick, determined and damning. There is no market in HLS and we will ensure there will never be one again!

HLS Bolsters its Criminal Record

On November 8th, HLS pleaded guilty to breaching Company Law by failing to hold an Annual General Meeting (AGM) for shareholders within 15 months of the previous one. HLS had planned to hold this required event on June 14th in New York City. However, activists obtained proxy forms, and hence admittance to the meeting, and flew in from all over the US to have it out with HLS, who, frankly, was losing these shareholders a lot of money!!

At the eleventh hour HLS announced the meeting was cancelled due to a "scheduling conflict." More accurately they were sick and tired of having their meetings taken over by activists who filled the room and called them on their record of animal abuse and financial failings.

Five months later HLS pleads guilty and claims, no longer that there was a "scheduling conflict," but that no one in NYC would offer them space to hold an AGM. Fancy that. No one, not one company in the financial capital of the world, with hundred-story-tall buildings and oceans of business men and women as far as the eye can see - NO ONE would offer them space?

It seems the location HLS had already reserved, where over a hundred protesters converged the morning of the meeting, had second thoughts about allowing HLS inside it's doors. Wherever HLS goes, we go with them!

Do we need more indications of what a pathetic company HLS is - they can't find one company in all of New York City that will let them hold a meeting required by law. And now they are a pathetic company with a criminal record.

HLS Goes American

"If we move off the UK exchange to the US, they (SHAC) have effectively won. It's a stand that has to be made" -Brian Cass, Managing Director of HLS, quoted in May to the Huntingdon and St. Ives Crier.

How do those words taste now, Brian?

On October 9th, 2001 HLS announced that they would become a US-listed, private company subject to shareholder approval. This announcement comes only nine months after HLS was saved from financial collapse in an eleventh hour bailout refinancing package from the scandalous Little Rock investment firm Stephens Inc. The loan of 33 million dollars was meant to secure HLS's financial future for six years as promises and projections about increased profits and cuts in losses flew about.

Not even a year later, convicted for not having an AGM, and a half-year report showing the clearest indication yet that the lab is financially dead in the water, HLS has had its hand forced and is attempting to implement yet another plan to stave off the inevitable. Make no mistake - this re-listing and buy-out by the HLS shell company Life Sciences Research (LSR), is an act of desperation HLS did not want to do.

Despite the transparent spin HLS is attempting to put on the current move it is NOT healthy for the company, and something they have been desperate to avoid. Cass's quote above says it all! HLS has been in a desperate fight to stay UK-listed for the last nine months as they have attempted to set up a Nominee account that would shelter their shareholder list, have had to take a government bank account through the Department of Trade and Industry as no other bank would assist them, and have met with numerous government officials and representatives of the pharmaceutical industry to stabilize their UK operations.

All of this is to no avail, and the clearest indication that what we are doing is extremely effective. HLS has lost credibility, had to eat their words, and are on their last attempt for survival.

The re-listing is not a move that is beneficial to the company as a whole or it's faithful shareholder base. Essentially, Stephens has forced the re-listing as a condition of offering further support. By meandering through the SEC documents HLS has filed in announcement of their predicament, it is clear this is a Stephens-driven proposal that only works to their benefit.

The Plan: HLS is urging its shareholders to accept a buyout from the newly formed LSR, which is comprised of current HLS directors. LSR is incorporated in Maryland where state law only permits shareholders with a 5% hold in the company for over six months to have access to the shareholder list. LSR will offer one share for 50 ordinary shares and one share for two ADR shares comprising 85% of the company. The remaining 15% stake of the company is being sold to Stephens and FHP Realty - a puppet company run by HLS CEO Andrew Baker.

"If we move off the UK exchange to the US, they (SHAC) have effectively won. It's a stand that has to be made"
—Brian Cass, Managing Director of HLS, quoted in May to the Huntingdon and St. Ives Crier

HLS's sad spin on the plan is that this will benefit the company in that:
- There is a better understanding of the role and importance of their work in the US, and it will give them more credibility as a number of other CRO's are US-listed.
- There are privacy laws protecting the already widely known shareholder list.
- The move should result in more trading of their stock in the US.

The reality for HLS is far less optimistic than what they are trying to sell. The timing for this listing could not be worse for the lab as all of their market makers have dropped HLS due to the protest activity of animal rights activists [see page 8]. Without any market makers, and now NO listing on the London Stock Exchange, HLS will not be able to move their shares and this damages

SHAC UK Regulates the Pace

The campaign against HLS in the UK is going from strength to strength. HLS and their clients are getting the battering of their lifetime with office occupations, lock-ons, arson attacks and plenty of 'criminal' damage being reported on a regular basis.

Activists all over the world are now joining the fight against HLS with actions now happening in Germany, Sweden, Austalia, Argentina and many other places.

As HLS prepares to become listed on the US stock exchange we are preparing for the next phase in the campaign against them. Activists in the UK will be joining up with you in the US to hammer the hell out of the Bank of America and make sure that on both sides of the Atlantic the BofA and Stephens feel the brunt of our anger at their investment in HLS, by joining together with an international focus on the key players in the dirty world of Huntingdon Life Sciences it is only a matter of time until their gates slam shut for the final time.

News

Here is a roundup of some of the most recent UK events and actions that have given HLS a good hard slap in the face:

• Brian Cass and other top monsters at HLS had to suffer the humiliation and fear of having hundreds of screaming activists outside their homes on the last national demo. The streets of St. Ives (home of Cass) were packed out with chanting activists who exposed and shamed this filthy man right before the eyes of his neighbours. In the meantime, activists were up on the roof of the home of a director of one of HLS's customers.

• SHAC activist Lynn Sawyer who was maimed for life when an off duty police officer pulled her down from a tripod during an anti-HLS action last year took part of her revenge by barricading herself inside of HLS for over three hours. She drove her car through the gates, pulled up in the car park and gained access to the rodent inhalation building before barricading herself in an office and using HLS's own phone to leak information on clients, experiments and employees back to the SHAC office. After three hours, the police smashed the walls down to remove her!

• HLS customer Ligand Pharmaceuticals (who funded experiments during which HLS workers beat beagles so badly that they could not walk) have had a hard time of it recently with bomb hoaxes at their offices and a reported arson attack on the home of their director.

• Lock-ons are happening all the time against HLS and their customers. In September a massive action took place at Shell's only UK fuel refinery in Cheshire. At 6:00am one morning four removal vans full of concrete-filled barrels and determined activists pulled up at various locations around the huge chemical complex before blocking gates, roads and other access to the site by locking onto the barrels and then to each other.

left: 27 activists were arrested after blockading a Shell oil refinery in Cheshire using concrete barrels and forcing the road closed for nine hours.

Shell lost hundreds of thousands of pounds as the lock-on lasted over nine hours before 29 people were arrested and others got away. Hundreds of workers and dozens of fuel tankers were unable to get into the site which was shut off for the day!

• On October 29 hundreds of activists joined people in the US and the rest of the world in targeting HLS. They split into groups and descended on London which is riddled with HLS collaborators.

100 enraged people went to the HQ of HLS customer Shell and attempted to storm the building. The police penned them in and they spent several hours fighting the police, setting off alarms and smoke bombs and throwing bangers at the building, all to the horror of Shell's employees.

Other groups visited other offices of HLS clients and investors all of whom were given loads of hassle.

We recently received the following communiqué :

"In the small hours of Thursday morning 20th a small group of activists raided a Shell depot in Aylesford, Kent. Eight tankers were sabotaged in connection with SHAC's day of action against Shell planned for later that day.

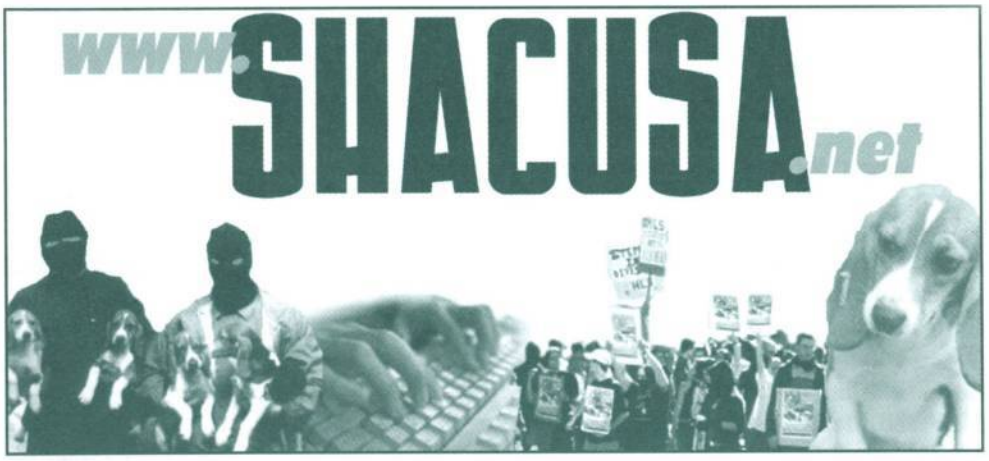

Tyres were slashed, locks were glued and fuel systems were contaminated on all eight tankers and one van.

I love it when a plan comes together - THE A-TEAM"

We must also not forget our fellow activist Barry Horne who died as a result of his hunger strikes against vivisection earlier this month [see page 14]. Barry will be sadly missed by our entire movement and it has been predicted that animal abusers such as HLS will suffer severe backlash as a result of his death.

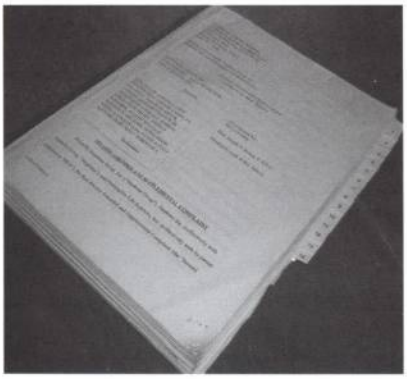

Our anger at the death of Barry and our anger at the continuous slaughter of animals at HLS must spur us on to fight even harder for the closure of this hell-hole. With 500 more deaths every single day we have no time to lose. Together we can do it....

.....GO GET 'EM!

LEGAL UPDATE

You know you're being effective when your opponent retaliates - and Stephens Inc. has retaliated to the tune of a multi-million dollar lawsuit against SHAC. Clearly we are wiping the floor with Stephens. You don't take out multi-million dollar lawsuits, pay big-shot lawyers hundreds of dollars an hour, or bother to sue a bunch of unemployed kids unless you are affected - affected, that is, and too stubborn to do the easy, sensible thing and pull out of HLS.

RICO (Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations) laws were designed to protect small businesses from organized crime. How ironic that they are now being used to "protect" a multi-million dollar company from an all-volunteer, grassroots organization.

On October 2nd, SHAC was court-ordered to a settlement conference. Stephens "offered" to settle the lawsuit if SHAC agreed to a roster of restrictions on how we can run our campaign. We told them to take a hike. We will not bargain our (and thus your) rights away, we will not settle this lawsuit and we will never back down.

The lawsuit is going forward and frankly, it is meaningless. SHAC is more determined than ever to shut HLS down and we're going to do that by getting Stephens to divest regardless of their petty lawsuit. It does, however, make for a few good laughs as we've been able to watch HLS piss away what little money it has left suing SHAC.

Stephens, don't you get it?? - we don't care! Sue us all you want. You'll never see a dime from us. The police can't watch your property all the time, you can't jail all of us, and there will always be thousands of people who see through your lies and are willing to do whatever it takes to close HLS.

We are smarter, more creative, more committed and we have the deaths of 500 animals every day driving us! Your greed, ego, and lust for blood money could never be as strong as our determination! And since you can't seem to figure it out on your own, we'll say it to you plain and clear so there is no confusion: there is nothing - we repeat, NOTHING - you can do to make the animal rights movement go away! Nothing, that is, except divest from HLS!!

If you would like to donate to SHAC's legal fund to fight the lawsuit and defend those arrested during demonstrations, please earmark checks "SHAC Legal" and send to:

NEWS BRIEFS: Smashing HLS is not a Spectator Sport!!

It seems HLS and Stephens never get a rest! Check us out at www.shacusa.net for frequent news updates, action alerts, what you can do, and more.

Miscellaneous

Word has circulated that HLS and Stephens employees are receiving quite a bit of unsolicited mail at their homes including magazine subscriptions and "send no money now" gifts. When commemorative gifts and magazines arrive, the recipients are forced to either pay for the gifts or go through the hassle of sending them back and stopping the subscriptions.

In England, HLS now pays someone full-time to sort through and return all the junk mail employees receive at their homes, in order to protect their credit rating!

Workers of HLS and many of its affiliates have complained of phone calls at 3 a.m., excessive postal mail and e-mail.

Apparently, it's rather unpleasant to be reminded at all hours of the day and night that you work for a company that is responsible for the deaths of 500 animals every day. We wonder if it's as unpleasant as living in a cage 24/7, being forced to inhale and ingest toxic chemicals, often operated on without anesthesia during, or pain killers after, the procedure, and then be killed and dissected - or as the case has been at HLS, dissected and then killed!

Activists around the country have reported flyers popping up on phone booths and lampposts advertising cheap concert tickets, apartments for rent, weight-loss programs and other services. The contact number is that of an HLS or Stephens employee.

Seems puppy killers need to take their phones off the hook during dinner to avoid calls from giddy N'Sync fans looking for tickets!

Recently, SHAC USA has been receiving loads of anonymous tips from members of the Little Rock community who hate Warren Stephens for their own reasons. We've been told that he was quite the drug dealer back in the day pushing pot, LSD and cocaine on the streets and stealing from his family to maintain these business ventures.

See www.shacusa.net to find out what people are saying about Warren.

HLS Greet the Workers Demo !

On October 12 activists descended upon HLS in New Jersey where they spent three hours filling the air with screams of outrage directed towards the employees leaving for the weekend.

ADL NJ continues to hold protests at HLS on the second Friday of every month. For details and directions to the next event: (732) 296-1202.

Bank of America Attacked

The underground Animal Liberation Front (A.L.F.) targeted Stephens Inc. affiliate Bank of America on October 24. The A.L.F. took credit for smashing over 30 windows at a Long Island, New York BofA building.

HLS Presentation Disrupted: Washington DC

During a Meeting of the American College of Toxicology, a member of Compassion Over Killing attended and disrupted the speech of Carol S. Auletta, the Senior Director at HLS, on November 4. The activist stood up in the second row and spoke about the abuse of animals at HLS then chanted until being escorted out by hotel security.

On November 12 a judge dismissed the case against five activists arrested at a New Jersey branch of the Bank of New York during a disruption on July 13.

HLS Presentation Disrupted: San Diego

At a Pharmacology conference on November 13, activists caused a ruckus at the HLS display and left the exhibit hall in confusion. The room was in silent disbelief as the protesters berated HLS for the deaths of 500 animals each day. The activists were escorted out of the building and no arrests were made.

Bank of America - You're Either With Us or Against Us: Demand Stephens Inc. Sever Ties With HLS!

Every moment for those animals inside HLS is pure hell. Every second, every aspect of their lives, everywhere they turn, they are met with suffering and pain. On January 29th, 2001 this torture chamber was on the verge of bankruptcy, almost closed for good. But at the eleventh hour, in an act of unconscionable "generosity," Stephens loaned HLS $33 million to stay in business.

Hence, every animal at HLS, who has endured a life filled with agony and anguish since that very moment has done so because of Stephens. It is our job to make sure that the indignation of the animal rights movement is equally as prevalent in the life of Stephens and its executives. Public Enemy Number One: Stephens and everything and anything they touch.

The campaign to close HLS has followed Stephens to an exclusive golf club in Georgia, to an investment conference in Las Vegas, and to their doorsteps in Little Rock; we've been inside their offices, outside their homes, on their phone lines and in their e-mail systems - from coast to coast, North to South, we have shown Stephens there is nowhere they can hide.

Likewise, we've made sure that no aspect of this business remains untouched. SHAC has taken on one of Stephens's most significant business allies - the Bank of America. BofA has its entire mutual fund program run through Stephens, creating a duplicitous and profitable relationship.

Public Enemy Number One: Stephens Inc. and everything and anything they touch

This business venture provides Stephens with the capital and business credibility that allowed it to save HLS from financial ruin. Around the country and the world, animal activists are targeting BofA in their city, ensuring that the pressure on Stephens is far-reaching and incessant. Warren may be able to ignore activists for some time, but he will hardly be able to ignore BofA demanding he make the protests, phone calls, home demos, and underground action stop!!

In San Francisco, in an attempt at dialogue with BofA, activists sent bank executives a letter demanding the bank publicly denounce Stephens's involvement with HLS and offered to meet with and provide further information about Stephens and HLS. BofA responded by dismissing concerns about their involvement with the notorious lab as "misdirected."

Consequently, there have been numerous banner-hangs against BofA, and the entire city has been wheatpasted with posters about BofA's involvement with Stephens and the deaths of 500 animals every day.

SHAC activists in Seattle have held numerous protests and phone/fax-ins against BofA. They've learned that numerous BofA account holders are now former BofA account holders, as they've closed their accounts in an effort to urge the bank to pressure Stephens into cutting its ties with HLS.

Others have chosen to take their actions against BofA underground. There has been word of extensive property damage in Portland, and Long Island, New York reports 30 BofA windows smashed in one evening. A high price to pay for refusing to use your influence with Stephens and urge them to cut all ties with HLS.

Stephens has offices in select cities around the country - but BofA has branches in communities nationwide. If you do not live in a city with a Stephens office, contact SHAC to get involved with the BofA campaign and show Stephens there is no area of their lives that will go untouched by this campaign!

Don't Forget Barry - or the Animals

Its with our deepest regrets that we say goodbye to a friend of the animals - Barry Horne. Barry dedicated his life towards the goal of animal liberation - most importantly he just didn't speak it - he lived it. Barry felt that words needed to be put into action, that the animals dying inside of labs, slaughterhouses and fur farms didn't have any time to waste. He took the crucial step to move outside of his comfort zone and hit the animal abusers head on.

We can all learn an important lesson from Barry. The idea of animal liberation is not just a philosophy, its a way of life. In order for us to make it a reality, we need to challenge the notions of what we are told is the right way of doing things and determine what is the effective way of doing things. The effective ways may not always be the most popular or most convenient, but we are not here to make friends. We are here to save those that are being exploited, tortured and killed.

Every day 500 animals die inside of HLS. Its up to each and every one of us to determine what the most effective way is to shut down the vile lab. But we don't have any time to waste. So don't forget Barry, his passion for animal liberation and his bravery to step outside of the realm of comfortability - and most importantly - don't forget the animals.

-SHAC USA

"The fight is not for us, not for our personal wants and needs. It is for every animal that has ever suffered and died in the vivisection labs, and for every animal that will suffer and die in those same labs unless we end this evil business now! The souls of the tortured dead cry out for justice, the cry of the living is for freedom. We can create that justice and we can deliver that freedom. The animals have no one but us, we will not fail them."

- Barry Horne, 1952 - 2001

HLS Presentation Disrupted: United Kingdom

Also on November 13, HLS's stall at a conference on pesticides and agrosciences was disrupted not once, but TWICE.

Reportedly, activists caused quite a commotion (including stink bombs, shouting, etc.) at the HLS exhibit in the morning and in their "hospitality suite" in the afternoon.

Also stink bombs were going off all over the hotel throughout the day and undercover video was taken of those representing HLS at the event.

Stephens's NYC Office Heavily Stickered Twice

The New York City office of Tim Sweet, Stephens Inc. regional executive, was heavily stickered on November 14 and November 23. Activists managed to bypass both security and ID checks and went up to the 24th floor, which houses Sweet's office, where anti-Stephens stickers were placed on doors, walls, and office equipment. The exterior of the building and surrounding neighborhood were also plastered with stickers.

Stephens stInc.

On November 15 a stink bomb was released in yet another Stephens office - this time in Austin, Texas! Word has it that it caused quite a ruckus and that a sign reading "Puppy Killers" was pasted to the window of the office.

HLS Greet the Workers Demo II

SHAC USA and ADL NJ dedicated the November 16th greet-the-workers demo to our fallen warrior, Barry Horne [see left]. There were events around the world held in remembrance on this day, when hundreds of activists from all over the United Kingdom came together to say goodbye and bury their comrade.

There were also Barry Horne solidarity demos at Stephens Inc. offices in Chicago and Little Rock as well as a protest at the British consulate in San Francisco following a demonstration against HLS investor State Street.

the value of the stock and undermines the company's legitimacy. This is a complete contradiction of what they are trying to sell.

As stated above, HLS's hope for privacy from the US listing and Maryland shareholder privacy laws is nothing but a pipe dream for the company. HLS can keep nothing secret. Stephens's bail-out of HLS in January was meant to be very hush-hush but was discovered in a matter of days. The same will prove true for other companies unwise enough to cross our path.

In terms of finding a climate more hospitable and "understanding" about the nature of HLS's vile work, they could not be more mistaken about the US. The campaign to shut down HLS has breathed new life into the US animal protection movement and has seen the mobilization of tens of thousands across the country to smash this vile lab.

This has become the biggest and most significant campaign in anti-vivisection history and the momentum grows every day with the deaths of 500 animals. The ideas and commitment of us all has shown effective as HLS and Stephens took out a multi-million dollar lawsuit against SHAC-USA claiming to have lost millions from our efforts.

This latest move gives us in the US an opportunity to refocus our energies and step into the spotlight of this campaign, as our collective actions will be what ultimately breaks HLS's financial back.

We can now abandon the Bank of New York campaign as they are no longer needed to trade British shares in the US and pour everything we've got into Stephens and their collaborators (like the Bank of America). If there was ever a time to be excited about our strategies and what we have managed to do, it is now. Now, more than ever before, we MUST double our efforts and get the job done!

WE ARE SMARTER - WE ARE MORE COMMITTED - WE ARE WINNING!

Please Write to Anti-HLS Prisoners

On November 14, three organizers of Stop Huntingdon Animal Cruelty - UK (SHAC UK) were forced to enter guilty pleas to charges of "Incite and Cause a Public Nuisance". The charges related to the publication of the SHAC newsletter which allegedly encouraged readers to call, send unsolicited stuff to, and otherwise harass HLS employees and investors.

Following their guilty pleas, they were sentenced to 1 year imprisonment each (they are expected to serve six months).

Show your solidarity with the SHAC 3 by sending urgent letters of support to Heather, Natasha, and Greg:

They don't have prisoner numbers yet so please put "new prisoner" after each of their names.

Join Stop Huntingdon Animal Cruelty - USA as we embark upon the next phase of the campaign against Huntingdon Life Sciences and their Daddy Warbucks, Stephens Inc.

SHAC will be embarking upon a tour of Stephens offices holding protests, home demos, vigils, and speaking events from Boston to St. Petersburg, Chicago to Dallas. The tour will conclude in another massive weekend of action in Little Rock, Arkansas... Be there for round 2!!

Don't miss the events in your area!! Travel to the tour stop closest to your region for a weekend of action.

The tour will be followed up with a national day of action against Stephens Inc. Target your local Stephens office or their affiliate Bank of America!

There is nowhere Stephens can hide from the U.S. animal rights movement - we will make sure we are everywhere they are until they divest from HLS!!

Contact SHAC if you'd like to help promote the tour stop in your area or organize an event for the national day of action.

NATIONAL DAY OF ACTION AGAINST STEPHENS INC.
JANUARY 25

Warren thought it was over...

JANUARY 13,14

...we're coming back.

no where to RUN, no where to HIDE

Warren Stephens insisted October 29th would be "business as usual" at his downtown office. He obviously underestimated the power of the animal rights movement in the US.

What he also doesn't seem to realize is that we will not back down until he divests from HLS. We won't back down - and we will win.

Join SHAC USA as we return for round two in Little Rock. January 13th & 14th. And when you leave, take your rage with you.

Take the energy, emotion and dedication home and organize and participate in the national day of action against Stephens Inc. January 25th.
