GUEST EDITORIAL

The solidarity built by this campaign has created a bedrock for activists all over the world. Not only that, but it is possibly the bravest and most important animal rights campaign of my time. - Shannon Keith, esq.

I remember once seeing a flyer by an animal rights group that stated something to the effect of: "Maybe one day activists won't be imprisoned for fighting for the freedom of animals." It moved me deeply. Although simple and obvious, it encompassed all that I was feeling, and I became angry. The anger then turned into action, and I have since been dedicated to fighting not only for animal rights, but for the rights of those who seek to liberate non-human animals.

My motivation, when I have just had enough and seen too much cruelty to move on, lay in those persons who achieve that which I fantasize about; it lay in the thought that I can help those individuals who seek to do what the animals are wishing we would; and it lay in the positivity that there are others out there who share my passion, and can use their education and degrees to join in this worthy, noble movement.

Much has been said about animal rights activists, both under and above ground. As we know, government and media alike enjoy using fanatical words like "extremist" and "terrorist." These words only fuel the fire in my heart; the fire that says we must fight, and we must never give up.

There is no doubt that our climate is changing. It is a scary time; a time of repression and anger, reminiscent of the days when individuals were put on trial for their beliefs. It seems that these days, not only are individuals, groups, and associations put on trial for their beliefs, but they are harassed, prosecuted, condemned, imprisoned, beaten, and tortured.

Our First Amendment guarantees Freedom of Speech, Religion and Assembly; yet, all too quickly, we have seen those freedoms stolen. Since the Civil Rights Era, statutes were enacted to protect those with deeply held political beliefs. However, we have seen those statutes fall by the wayside with the inception of the Patriot Act and other unconstitutional laws enacted by overzealous legislators post-September 11th.

Now is the time for people to take a stand against this injustice, and not just political activists, but lay persons, and especially, lawyers. Our legal system, corrupt as it is, is only perpetuated by attorneys who fail to challenge the system as a whole.

We can no longer stand by and accept the system as it stands, and its many changing ways. If we fail to take proactive measures now, we will have no credibility in the future. An important lesson I have learned practicing law is that if you fail to challenge issues, and fail to create a paper trail, you have a losing case in the end. Although at times it may be uncomfortable to say something, one must think of the long-term consequences of silence; and this concept goes for everyone.

In supporting the SHAC campaign, both as an activist and as an attorney, my confidence in this movement has soared. The solidarity built by this campaign has created a bedrock for activists all over the world. Not only that, but it is possibly the bravest and most important animal rights campaign of my time.

Notably, we have seen arrests, raids, subpoenas, and lawsuits as a result of the fight to close down HLS. While possibly appearing scary at first, the measures taken by federal and local agencies, as well as private companies and corporations, has only proven that the campaign is working. We only see this type of reaction when the status-quo has been challenged. We should be proud that it has, and that people are finally listening, regardless of the form in which the "listening" takes place. While at times uncomfortable, the SHAC campaign has its roots in the First Amendment. What SHAC encompasses is good old-fashioned Freedom of Speech.

Do not be afraid to exercise your rights. Think of the animals inside HLS, and how they need you to be their voice. Know that you have nothing to hide for supporting SHAC. Imagine the feeling when HLS closes its miserable doors. Confide in the fact that there are activists and attorneys that fully support this campaign and will do anything they can to help in time of need.

Keep up the fight! Close HLS!

SPLENDA
dying for a cup of coffee

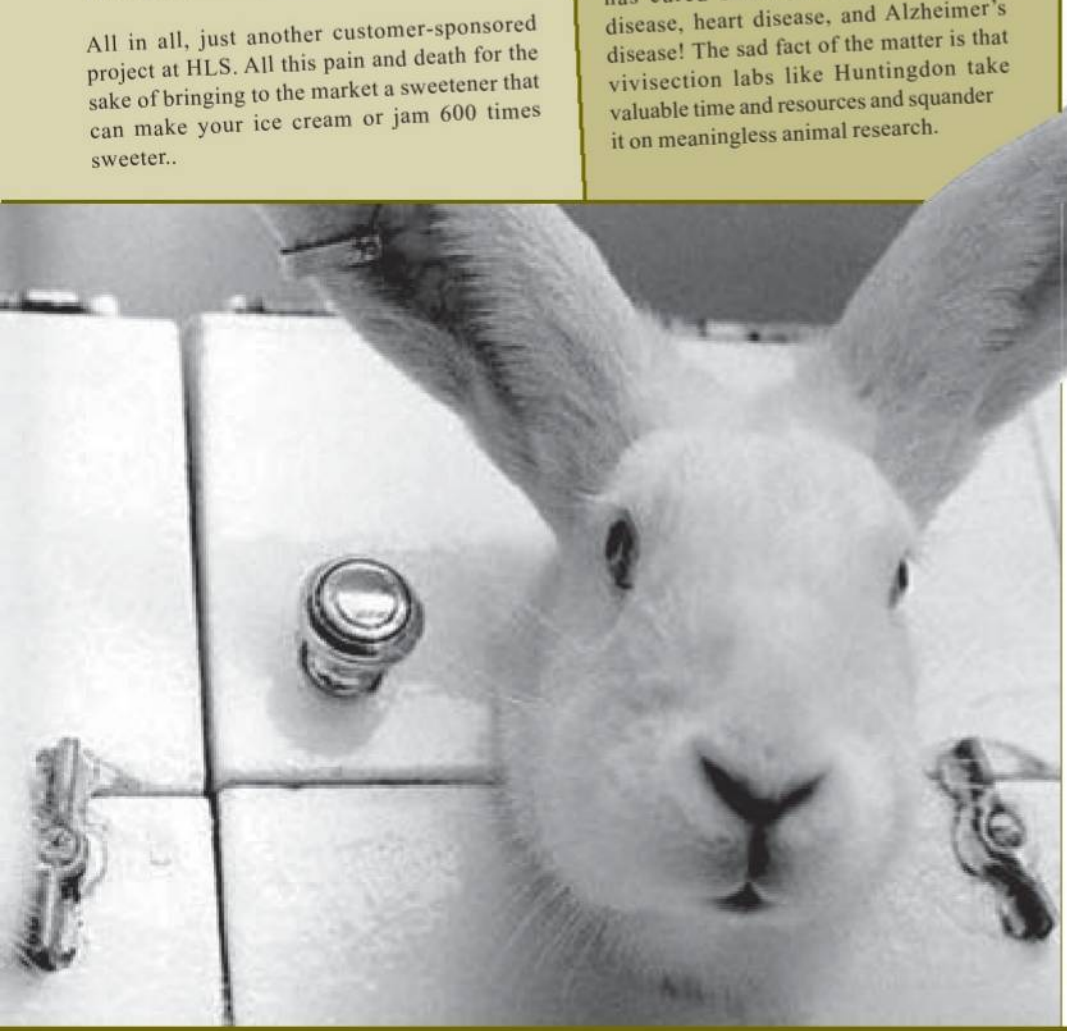

In a time when obesity has seen a dramatic increase, diabetes is plaguing more and more children, and doctors are warning people to cut down on their sugar intake, sugar giant Tate and Lyle, with the aid of McNeil Specialty Products, a division of Johnson and Johnson, came up with a sweetener 600 times more potent than real sugar! Now where do you think you go to test "safe" a product as "important" Sucralose, also called Splenda, – Huntingdon Life Sciences, of course.

Huntingdon played a big role in the testing that took place to bring this garbage product to the market. An estimated 12,800 animals died in the process, according to a published report in a recent scientific journal.

All in all, just another customer-sponsored project at HLS. All this pain and death for the sake of bringing to the market a sweetener that can make your ice cream or jam 600 times sweeter..

Too often we hear from our opposition, "Huntingdon performs live-saving research!" This is the claim and justification for animal testing so often fed to the press on the sanitized tours HLS gives to reporters and government inspectors. It is an assertion that is, without a trace of doubt, fundamentally and factually FALSE. Huntingdon is not in the business of developing life-saving medicines and therapies, but is instead a Contract Research Organization – a for profit company – that only tests what products it is contracted to.

In the 50 years HLS has been in operation, taking over 9 million lives, how many medical breakthroughs has it been responsible for? Perhaps all of us concerned about animal protection and public safety missed the news that HLS has cured cancer, AIDS, Parkinson's disease, heart disease, and Alzheimer's disease! The sad fact of the matter is that vivisection labs like Huntingdon take valuable time and resources and squander it on meaningless animal research.

GRUESOME DETAILS REVEALED

• 32 beagle dogs were locked in metal cages for 52 weeks. They were given Sucralose mixed in with their normal feed, and blood and urine samples were collected. At the end of the study they were killed by means of exsanguiation - they had their throats slit open and bled to death. They were then cut open and their organs, by now drained of blood so easier to dissect, were examined to test the product's toxicity levels.

• Four beagle puppies (or as HLS calls them – punching bags) were starved before being force-fed the super-sweet sugar powder. HLS employees then took blood samples from the jugulars of the infant dogs.

• An unspecified number of marmoset monkeys either died from the poisoning or were killed at the termination of the research at HLS.

• The report states that 12 of these monkeys, which were babies – under 10 months old – were force-fed Sucralose for seven weeks. Two of the primates died on the seventh day from brain defects, another primate was mysteriously killed after four weeks, and the remainder were murdered at the completion of the seventh week. Some of the recorded observations from this study noted "inappetence, body weight loss, unwillingness to use hind leg, hopping, involuntary grip reflexes, salivation and subdued mood."

• Huntingdon also used rabbits to study the effects of the product. These little animals were given 1200 times the expected daily intake and not surprisingly, most died from the trauma. Many of the other rabbits suffered from convulsions, weight loss, and various intestinal disorders.

• Huntingdon also tested the product on pregnant rabbits, mice, and rats, killing both the mothers and the fetuses.

FROM COAST TO COAST

www.HLSCUSTOMERS.com

"Sluggish economy got you feeling down? Good news, now you can both save animals and get paid. Let the vivisection industry fund your own personal vendetta against their bloody crimes. Many companies sponsoring research at HLS are hiring in a variety of positions that are begging to be filled by the likes of secret AR activists."
– From HLSCustomers.com

Www.HLScustomers.com is a new website causing all the uproar in the pharmaceutical industry. The site gives a step-by-step instructional on how to get a job inside a company sponsoring research at HLS. From creating a false identity, faking a resume, where to buy secret recording equipment, and how to leak internal documents, the website is a clearing house of information on infiltration. One section even posts all the current job openings at strategic companies.

With the prospect of animal activists applying for various positions, HLS customers now have to double their background checking costs, look at all employees with extreme paranoia, and never know when their deepest secrets will wind up in the hands of an activist. Ah, the price of doing business with HLS.

THINGS THAT GO 'BLAST' IN THE NIGHT

now this is what we call 'breaking news'

Unless you have been on Mars, the news of the bombings has probably not escaped you. Chiron and the Yamanouchi subsidiary Shaklee, both located in the bay area of California, were both subject to late night pipe-bomb explosions. Two devices exploded outside of the offices of Chiron in late August, causing damage to the building. Another explosion happened outside of Shaklee in late September causing damage to the building, and the bomb allegedly had nails strapped to it.

Both actions were claimed by a new group called the "Revolutionary Cell: Animal Liberation Brigade." The communiqués sent contained explicit threats of violence and sent chilling messages personally to the management of companies contracting with HLS. Press internationally picked up and the story and ran articles essentially warning off companies from doing business with Huntingdon. This can't be too good for business. See SHAC's official statement on the explosions and more extensive coverage at:
shacamerica.net/news_sept30_03.htm

bombs and bullhorns

As if the bombing wasn't bad enough, life in general for Chiron has been miserable. Since the late Summer months and through the Fall, this biotech company has been treated to an onslaught of activism. The personal homes of the besieged company executives have become the battleground in the fight against HLS. There's been rotten fruit chucked on their doorsteps, personal assault alarms thrown in the bushes at 3am, chalked messages spelled out on their driveways, mock grave yards erected on the front lawns, and demonstrators lining the sidewalks of the neighborhood. Sponsoring cruelty at HLS has become an extremely personal issue for these folks.

Seattle activists have also staged several office demonstrations and followed one employee out into the forest on a hiking trip. NYC activists have staged two impromptu demonstrations against investor conferences Chiron has participated in, causing literally scores of police officers, ready-response officers, bomb-sniffing dogs, and FBI agents to create quite a scene, and a disruption.

CBC SAY SIANARAH!

In 1996, HLS and the Japanese company CBC formed a 50-50 partnership in opening an HLS sales office in Japan called HLSKK. This office was responsible for marketing Huntingdon's services to a host of Asian-based pharmaceutical and biotech companies. After demos happened worldwide, and especially in New York and Los Angeles (tons of home demos, phone calls, and direct action), CBC sold their 50% stake back to HLS and dealt a blow to both the management and legitimacy of the venture.

The loss of CBC strikes a blow to HLS's image in Japan, where it has been desperate to recruit new clients (as all the US and European companies treat HLS like a leper). Being humiliated in front of its worldwide customer base has become a weekly event for HLS.

firing the warning shot across the bow

There are currently 7 known Federal Grand Juries on the loose. These secret little institutions are about as un-American as they come. Those who are forced to testify are not allowed an attorney or to excercise their 1st and 5th amendment rights, and face imprisonment for failing to cooperate. California, Indiana, Washington, New Jersey, New York, Little Rock, and Oklahoma have all seen fit to ignore the founding principles of American civil liberties.

In Little Rock, those being forced to testify include a high-school student who allegedly sent a protest fax, and the former girlfriend (from 3 years prior) of a protest organizer, who has never been to Arkansas or protested Stephens Inc (what sort of perverted personal questions they have for her is dreadful to think about). Fortunately activist have traveled to and exposed as many of these pervert conventions as possible.

If you have been visited by the FBI, or given a Grand Jury subpoena, please contact SHAC USA right away. We can offer legal references, moral support, and press attention. Call (609) 936-8422.

SUMITOMO IN THE MORNING, SUMITOMO IN THE NIGHT

you can hit sumitomo however you like...

Day or night, the Sumitomo protesters have been out in full effect. Across the country from Los Angles to D.C., Philadelphia to Chicago, and New York City to Long Island, the Sumitomo Corporation of America has been getting a taste of grassroots activism. Chicago activists caused quite a stir in the neighborhood of one Sumitomo executive, unleashing a torrent of emails from locals about their protest activity. New York City activists staged a week-long series of all day protests outside the company's HQ, drawing a ton of support, internal information, and new faces to the cause. Long Island animal rights supporters secretly painted anti-HLS slogans of the sidewalk and surfboard of another unlucky Sumitomo rep.

All of these actions are a part of a global campaign, as demonstrations are also raging in London, Europe, and Asia. Sumitomo has been doing a fair bit of sniveling as a result, but the protests won't stop until they stop affiliating with HLS.

HITTING 'EM WHERE IT HURTS

kicking hls in the proverbial nuts

What a kick to the crotch the last few months have been to Huntingdon. There has been the usual on-slaught of home demonstrations to keep the locals well aware of (and annoyed by) the antics of HLS employees. Michael "Blockhead" Caulfield has been getting a fair share of the nasty 3AM wakeup phone calls, Rich Michaelson's whole neighborhood was treated to an early start as a personal assault alarm screeched away in his bushes, Andrew Baker's penthouse pad is consistently rattled by the megaphone screams of demon-strators, and personalized stop-sign stickers naming various employees have been showing up everywhere in New Jersey.

And when Huntingdon tries to step out and make some friends, we're there to greet them. In October HLS sponsored a "Lab Quality Assurance" conference in DC – and humorously enough, Michael Caulfield thought he could present on "The Animal Rights Movement," or if he were truthful about it "How I got my butt kicked by the AR Movement." Even though Caulfield cancelled at the last minute, every day of the conference protesters made sure to make it known that HLS is a sinking ship, and any customer that gets on board with this lab will go down with it!

shac eye FOR THE HUNTINGDON GUY

As television proves that even the biggest slob can be made over by 5 self-proclaimed "gay guys" on Bravo's "Queer Eye for the Straight Guy", we at SHAC believe that even the hardest businessman involved in animal cruelty can be "turned around" by the campaign. To our left we have a CEO of a customer of Huntingdon, a market maker or perhaps an investor in the doomed lab. He's been flying under the radar in the world of animal rights, walks tall with a spring in his step and pockets full of blood money... but not for long! Lets take a look at what happens on "SHAC Eye for the HLS Guy"!

1 SHAC USA approached the company via polite letters and faxes encouraging open dialogue, ideas and the eventual severing of ties with HLS. The CEO responded by simply not responding, instead deciding to pick a fight. The SHAC guys thought rolled up sleeves would suit this suit best, and the abandonment of Huntingdon.

2 This exec started feeling a little heat under the collar as the pressure mounted against his company. With the onset of letters, emails and phone calls, work levels began slowing as productivity turned to frustration. SHAC suggested a loosening of the collar and tie to release steam, and the abandonment of Huntingdon.

3 As protests go from outside the corporation into the offices, and protesters take to the homes of execs, the business begins to fall apart. Bad publicity linking them to puppy killers and constant embarrassment in front of coworkers and neighbors alike lead the SHAC guys to suggest a disheveled briefcase to remind them the wreck their company has become, and the abandonment of Huntingdon.

4 This CEO wakes up one morning to find his house, car and driveway spraypainted with slogans and his windows smashed out by bricks. Uh-oh! This certainly isn't helping his case of 'The Mondays'! What's left to do but turn your pockets inside out! The SHAC team recommends showing your empty pockets will only help you get it through your head, that not only are you losing money at work, but associating with HLS will empty your personal bank account; and of course, the abandonment of Huntingdon.

5 The exec and their company figured it out! They abandon HLS, severing all ties with Huntingdon. After faxing a letter over to the SHAC offices promising never to affiliate with HLS ever again, he looks down and realizes he has literally had his socks knocked off. The SHAC team suggests, of course, socks.

Welcome to the second installment of the SHAC action mailers. Exhibit B is being included within the SHAC newsletter this one final time, and then, if you have not already signed up, you will not receive Exhibit C. So if you forget to sign up, it's not just you who will be losing out, but also all the animals who are counting on your every action for their liberation.

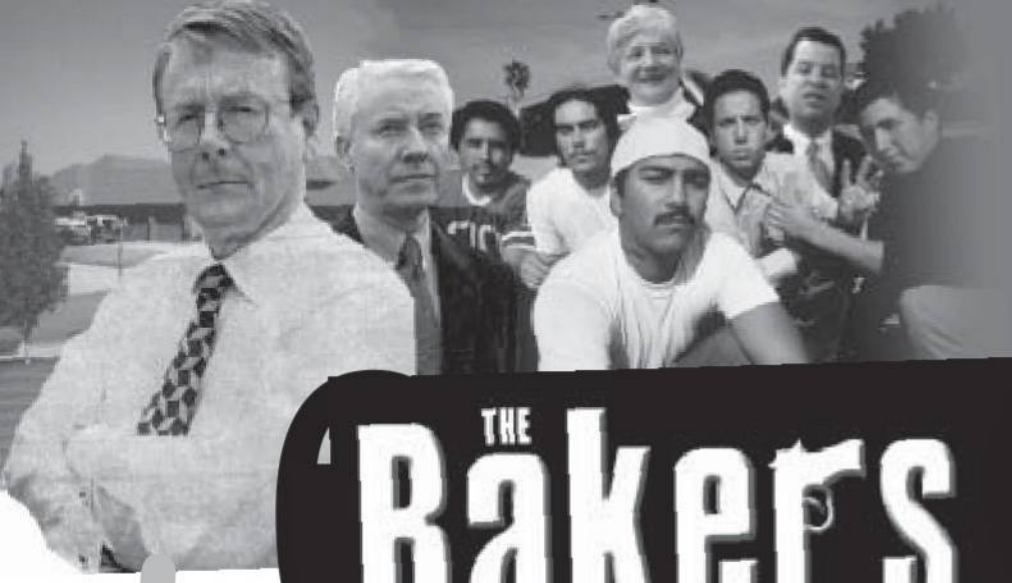

We thought we'd just go ahead and make it easier for the SLAPP suits that will come raining down on us because of these mailers, and name these calls to action as they are destined to be deemed – evidence. They are more than just evidence of activism (which is all perfectly legal and necessary); they are evidence of a point in time where a movement of people chose to determine the future of the vivisection industry. The future we are drawing out is one where each and every person who dares to raise a scalpel to the throat of an animal is exposed, shamed, humiliated, and left a shell of their former self. We are creating a future for vivisection, that is essentially, futureless.

Exhibit B comes at you as, Exhibit Bold, Exhibit Bad-Ass, or considering we are touching upon Yamanouchi within, possibly Exhibit Bomb (only kidding of course, we don't encourage bombings and such…) This action guide is your resource tool to help dismantle the HLS lifelines. How you use the information contained herein is completely up to you, just use it! Demonstrate to Andrew Baker and his crooked cronies they are the number one priority, give Yamanouchi a run for its blood-soaked money, make quick work of Mellon Investor Services, and have heaps on fun on the HLS phone lines.

Expect no frills and fluffy feel-good pats on the back for your actions, though. Activism isn't a popularity contest and is not about your ego. The information and strategies laid out within are about pure, unadulterated activism, the kind that is sometimes edgy, usually controversial, but always effective. With each passing newsletter and campaign target, the SHAC campaign has consistently taken the intensity up a notch. After the last year and a half we all know what is needed and what works, so for the sake of the animals of Huntingdon, and the vivisection victims that are next on our agenda, let's get to work.

EXHIBIT B

Warning: The information contained below is not intended for the squeamish or faint of heart. The individuals profiled are guilty of perverted and heinous acts of cruelty. The victims are many, and their suffering was real. These criminals are extremely dangerous and violent, and should be approached with caution and contempt.

THE Bakers

Andrew Baker

Andrew Baker is the ring leader of the notorious animal cruelty crime syndicate - Huntingdon Life Sciences. Baker earned his stripes as the HLS don by putting his own reputation and personal wealth on the line for the failing lab. From 1998 until present time he has called on all the favors owed to him from his previous business years, in effort to make Huntingdon relevant again. Despite all the muscle, Baker has so far been unsuccessful, as long-time associates such as Kirby Cramer (formerly of the competing crime family 'Covance') and crooked business operations like Stephens Inc have left him in the lurches when they felt the 'heat.'

Baker has a reputation for losing his temper in the press. He has grown increasingly desperate by his failed attempts and the strain is apparent.

Animal rights operatives in the field have kept steady pressure on his NYC Penthouse apartment. It is time to open up new fronts in the Baker campaign and set the stage for a bust!

Well, well... This should be the number one attraction on any animal rights activist's Hollywood star-map. This million-dollar home is located at the top of a hill looking over LA. Its small entrance gives a false appearance of being a small abode. Draping down the back of the mountainside are several floors of Baker's palace. Andrew's son-in-law [redacted] lives here (and is rumored to have a nasty coke habit!).

aka "tricky di

Rich Michaelson has served as the lead Capo under Baker for over a decade. As the Chief Financial Officer in the Huntingdon crime family, his job is to run the financial schemes, field off press inquiries, and 'cook the books'. Rich actually has more hands-on work with the business side of operations than just about anyone else.

Over the last year Rich has really come up through the ranks to claim his second in command position. He has become deeply invested in Huntingdon by taking on more and more personal stock. It is his name on all the SEC filings and press releases, and his responsibility to produce results and act as the financial advisor for Baker. Disrupting how Michaelson operates directly disrupts how Huntingdon is financially managed.

This lackey sits obediently at Baker's side.... Panting.

It is Mark's job to create the appearance of a company on the up-and-up. Bibi has been with Baker and Michaelson for years and is a trusted colleague.

In addition to acting as the business attorney, Bibi has taken out several 'hits' on the Constitutional values that America was founded upon. Through a "Strategic Litigation Against Public Participation" suit, Mark Bibi has declared war on the US 1st Amendment by trying to chill the right to protest and free speech. His indecency knows no bounds and Bibi is known for his dirty tricks. Approach with caution so you don't get caught!

What a surprise, this scumbag works in the same office suite as Dick and Andy. With all three of them concentrated in one spot, it certainly does heighten the importance of this building as a target point. (Where is the ALF when you need them?)

(NEW INFORMATION)

because they're ripe for the pickin'

Remember Deloitte and Touche, Quilcap, Oracle Partners, Stephens Inc, and E*Trade? Ah, those were good times. Tackling financial companies that provide vital operations to the lab has really been a pleasure of the animal rights community.

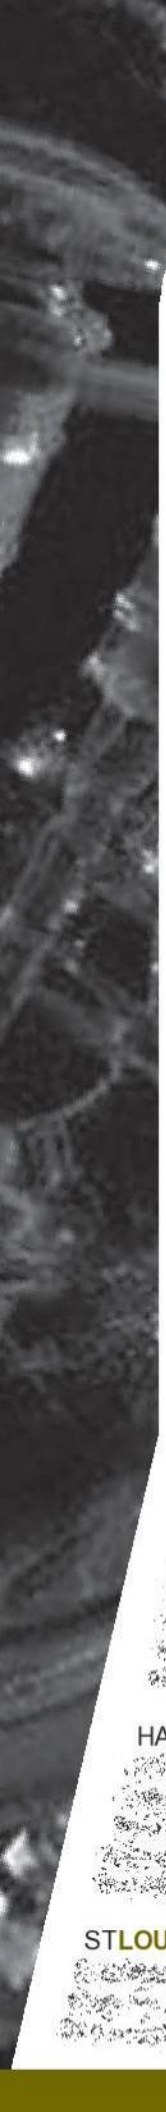

Mellon Investor Services, subsidiary to Mellon Financial Corp, has been acting as the Transfer Agent for Huntingdon's stock. A Transfer Agent holds three primary functions, which consist of acting as the intermediary for the company – paying out interest and dividends (which HLS does not have), issuing and cancelling stock certificates when shares are bought and sold, and handling lost or stolen stock. A Transfer Agent, like a market maker, is not legally necessary to perform trades on the market, but technically is.

Without Mellon, HLS will be left in the lurches and unable to perform any trades, unless one of two things happens. Either another transfer agent will have to pick up the company as a client, or HLS will have to hire someone to do this menial (but necessary) job in-house.

Like all the other financial targets, the loss of Mellon will mean more than just a hiccup in Huntingdon's financials. This will be yet another attack on the credibility of the already humiliated lab. This loss will be like throwing salt in its fiduciary wounds. Without any acting transfer agent our favorite middle-of-nowhere hicks at Legacy will be unable to make a trade no matter how much their perverted little hearts want to.

The banks, insurance, auditors, brokers, market makers, and investors have all left HLS in a very vulnerable position. Because we are clever enough to constantly find new ways to undermine the business position of HLS, the lab is incapable of a defense. Remember, companies like Mellon provide services HLS needs to survive, but are companies that do not need HLS for anything.

Please demonstrate to Mellon Investor Services that any company that does business with a criminal organization like HLS is not immune from criticism and pressure. We have reached out to Mellon and have asked them politely for dialogue on the issue, and for them to make the compassionate choice to dump HLS. Our efforts have been rebuffed, and now the gloves are off!

Yamanouchi's kamikaze mission

This Japanese company will crash and burn because of HLS!

This is seriously one f@*ked up company! It is famous for the experiment it sponsored at HLS where 37 dogs were to have their legs broken to test a product that was already in the market in several countries. With the help of Kim Bassinger, PeTA was able to put on enough public pressure that the experiments were cancelled, and the dogs were released (much to chagrin of HLS and Yamanouchi.)

After Huntingdon was shown to the world as a ruthless company that cared little about the science of its work, and even less about the welfare of the animals, Yamanouchi still has ties to the lab, even after being exposed to this sort of video testimony:

HLS Vet: "These dogs are crap dogs. Rejects. They are not healthy dogs and should not be used and if they were used it would be a poor quality study."

HLS Lab Tech: "...they should just break all their legs so they'll be easier to work with."

Michelle Rokke: "In study 3282, the dogs are still very fearful...When I reach for them they go nuts, flailing wildly as they try to evade my grasp. When I finally get a hold of them, they freeze and dig their feet into the floor grate, as if they suddenly remember they have reason to be afraid. The dogs are so stiff, the heavy cage grate is pulled out of the cage with them."

Michelle Rokke: "Brian said he didn't feel like dosing the Yamanouchi dogs, saying he was just going to throw the test material down the drain."

Apparently, this sort of behavior means nothing to Yamanouchi.

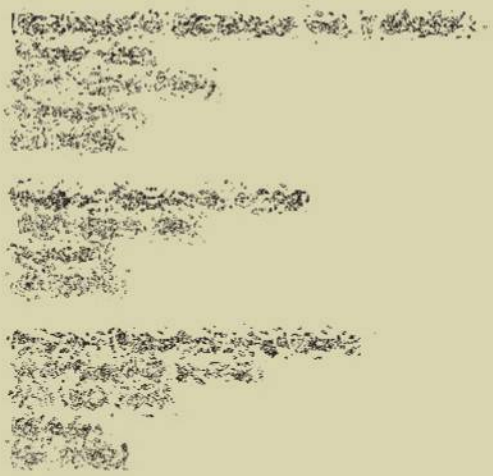

Beyond that experiment, this Japanese pharmaceutical company has also been exposed for trying to buy FOUR DAY OLD PUPPIES to use in an invasive and lethal experiment. This company is a living nightmare for animals.

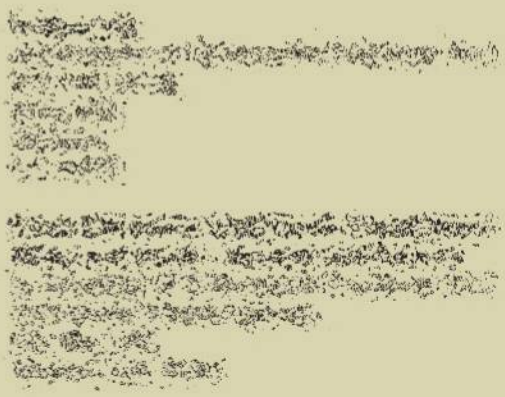

Yamanouchi is beyond dialogue and reasonable appeals to any sort of compassion, as this is a company devoid of all ethics. As such, it is a company that should be treated accordingly. While SHAC may not be advocating or lending vocal support to bombings and threats of violence, we certainly do not think for one minute we should be going easy on this Japanese bastard scumbag company. So, in the words of Yamanouchi, "Let's get cracking!"

I just called... to say... I hate you! (and I mean it from the bottom of my heart)

Up for a good laugh and want to help animals? Then give the following HLS employees a call while they're at work. Grab a phone card and find a public payphone and let them have it. The same people you see and hear in the undercover footage are only a dial away. The more time these monsters are kept tied up on your calls, the less productive employees they are. We know from all the lawsuits, complaints, and internal leaks that one of the things targeted companies hate more than anything is when that "damn ringing" just won't stop.

Tactical Tips:

1. Do not call from your house – unless you only plan to call once and to be polite (but come on, let's be honest here!).
2. If calling repeatedly, do NOT speak while on the phone. They could be recording the calls and you don't want to be busted for a phone call, right? Plus the silent breather is a classic – and one they hate.
3. Pick up one number and stick to it. Just like SHAC has demonstrated it effectiveness with laser-type focus on just HLS, don't spread yourself too thin by calling everyone.
4. This is a business – so call during business hours. (There are home numbers for evening fun).
5. Let others do the calling for you. Advertise in Free Ads or on posters for "Free Porn" or "Hot Sex" and let the perverts talk to the perverts.

hit 'em HARD hit 'em at HOME

You've done phone blockades, sent black faxes, and ordered novelty plates galore. Is armchair activism making you anxious? A person can only read about neighborhood festivities elsewhere for so long before wondering, "When will the fun come my way?" If the SHAC train never seems to stop in your town, here's your handy guide to home demos. Get up, get out, and bring it home!

Why Home Demos?

They work - plain and simple. Executives at multi-million-dollar companies don't give a damn if you're screaming at their building from 50 stories below. But they care very much when you bring the protest home and expose them to their neighbors.

Step One: Finding Your Target.

Search the company website for names. Call after hours and try different combinations of numbers on the voicemail directory to figure out last names. Or listen to individual extensions: "You've reached Bob Jones. I'm either out of the office or away from my desk. But please come to my house and have a protest." Or call during business hours and keep the secretary talking until she drops some names."Who would I talk to about... In department... You know, I was talking to someone there the other day and I can't remember his name for the life of me. Can you spell that? No, that wasn't it. Who else could it be?"

Minding the Law.

In 1988 the Supreme Court upheld a local ordinance prohibiting targeted home pickets (Frisby v. Schultz). The court based its ruling on the fact that the ordinance only prohibited targeted picketing; marching and leafleting through a neighborhood were still permissible forms of free speech.

So check out your local laws (Municode.com). Is there a residential picketing ordinance? If so, keep your events mobile. If not, feel free to protest directly in front of your target's home. Tell 'em "Hi" from SHAC!

"How Well Do You Know Your Neighbor?"

Let the community know your (veggie) beef with their neighbor. Make up some flyers about HLS and his/her connection to puppy killers (be sure to include the home address in case the neighbors would like to complain; pictures are good too!) and spend an afternoon flyering. And bring some with you on the day of your event.

Shame Shame Shame.

This is why you're there, to name, shame, and expose those who support HLS. So say it loud and clear! Bring big signs and banners with your target's name and address. And make some noise! Drums and personalized chants will wake the neighborhood up and bring many people out of their homes to see your signs, take your leaflets, and either love you or hate you. ("Stop the torture, stop the pain/Jane Target is to blame" is a good one). Be sure to check local sound ordinances if you plan to use a bullhorn.

Home (Demos) for the Holidays.

Mix it up, keep it dynamic, and keep them guessing! Activists have been known to visit targets at home at all hours of the morning and night, on holidays, Sundays, and when they're not home. They've enjoyed block parties and barbeques. They've held protests, marches, and candlelight vigils. They've leafleted neighborhoods and set up camps for days at a time. They've taken it beyond the neighborhood and exposed HLS supporters at church, the gym, community groups, bowling, and food shopping. As long as the animals don't get to go home and leave their suffering at the office, neither will those supporting it. Hit 'em hard! Hit 'em at home!

SHAC

In the last two months alone, actions have taken place against HLS and its customers in 12 countries across the world. The campaign to close Huntingdon is spreading like wildfire and destroying any company in its path.

The United Kingdom of Great Britain: SHAC HQ If you had to dub a movie title to the campaign in England it would have to be "The Fast and The Furious." Since the last newsletter UK activists have gone on a rampage across the whole the British Isle, leaving no friend of HLS left untouched. Over a dozen suppliers to Huntingdon have dropped the lab as a customer, taking away needed services and materials such as taxi pickups, launderers, computer software, lab equipment, and industrial supplies. HLS is being directly impacted by these losses and Brian Cass has had to admit it's cost the lab thousands.

The Japanese Customer Campaign has knocked the wind out of a good many companies. Sankyo, Sumitomo, Daiichi, Yamanouchi, Eisai, and Asahi Glass have all been on the receiving end of protests. From as far north as Glasgow to as far South as Brighton activists have been quick to demonstrate at the homes of executives, set up camps in their town centers, and have invaded their offices. Night time visits to these executives leave screeching alarms, glued locks, and painted slogans.

And it doesn't stop there. Doing what SHAC does best, getting under the skin of financial companies, shareholders in a number of these Japanese companies have found themselves on the receiving end of protest misery.

HLS is under fire – literally! In early August an arson attack took out the building and vehicles stored within owned by HLS. These vans were used for primate importation. HLS workers have not been forgotten by ALF. As an injunction limited how much time people can protest at HLS, the ALF has taken over with frequent night attacks on employees!

AUSTRIA: Activists have been busy protesting Sankyo. In addition to demonstrations, they have given a 7AM Saturday "wake-up" protest to the Sankyo managing director, and disrupted a Sankyo conference.

PORTUGAL: SHAC Portugal has taken on their Yamanouchi office with demonstrations, a number of menacing phone calls, and glued locks.

ITALY: These Italians are tough. Poor Yamanouchi has been subject to not only protests and mass leafleting, but a firebomb attack as well, when a car parked outside the building was set on fire. HLS customer Solvay has also been treated to an arson attack at its facility. Protests against Sumitomo have just recently begun.

SWITZERLAND: The Swiss office of Sankyo has been spray-painted and portested often.

HOLLAND: Yamanouchi has been protested (and firebombed) and its directors visited at home. Sumitomo has also been under fire and 9 of its directors have received home demonstrations.

GERMANY: SHAC Germany has been busy. They have tackled and protested against Yamanouchi, Sumitomo, Sankyo, and Eisai, and have staged home protests against their directors and executives.

IRELAND: Demonstrations have been happening outside of Sumitomo and Yamanouchi and they promise to keep the pressure on.

CANADA: SHAC Canada has singled out Sumitomo, staging loud and rowdy demonstrations, where paint attacks have happened. The protests have also followed the executives home, as the posh neighborhood of one Sumitomo big-wig has been exposed to the atrocities of HLS. Montreal activists upset the president of Abbot Labs as they turned up at this house; the targetted "Yellow Marcelo" has had to sneak out a backdoor!

RUSSIA: From Moscow, SHAC activists have been able to launch a number of crippling email and internet attacks. In addition to flooding the inboxes of companies like Chiron, SHAC Moscow has successfully taken down the websites for HLS, Daiichi US, and Fluon Polymers. They promise more actions and upcoming Electronic Civil Disobediences.

AUSTRALIA: SHAC Australia has jumped into the fray with protests against their Sumitomo office. Outside and inside, they are sending home the message that even down under this Japanese customer of HLS cannot escape the pressure.

the BEAGLE LEGAL personal background information, and upon debriefing later, all of the little factoids are collected to build a bigger psychological profile. These agents of repression are looking for your weaknesses and plotting the demise of your principles (and you along with it), so don't give them anything to work with.

FOUR LETTER WORDS

These FBI agents are not your friends. Your friends don't show up at 6AM pounding on your door, tell your employer you are a dangerous terrorist, or call your grandparents saying they are concerned about you going to jail. These FBI agents play games of manipulation and may appear friendly, but in no uncertain terms do they ever have your best interest in mind. They are not trying to protect you, and do not differentiate you from "the radical ones" who take things to far. If you care about animal rights, you're the enemy. It is that simple.

You have the right to remain silent

SO F'#@'ING USE IT!

This is the most basic of all security precautions. It is a form of self-defense from government repression that is so easy you don't have to do absolutely anything except keep your mouth shut. One would think that a precaution this rudimentary would be practiced by everyone and never be a cause for concern, but unfortunately this has not been the case!

Over the last six months, as the Gestapo forces of John Ashcroft have taken a perverse interest into animal rights activism, scores of people across the country have been approached by the FBI and have talked. From New York to Los Angeles, and everywhere in between, it is not just the "around-the-block" animal advocates that are getting that infamous knock on their door. It doesn't matter if you have just sent a few letters, attended one protest, or published an editorial – the following information is pertinent to everyone reading this. So pay attention, take notes, and get ready, because this is one test our movement cannot afford to fail!

NOT THAT INNOCENT

There are no innocent answers to questions asked by the FBI. Their questions are not conversational and are very measured. Your responses carry a lot of weight and determine whether or not they will be back to visit you, subpoena you, or raid your home.

"Are you a vegetarian?" or "We just want to know where you get leaflets from," and "What kind of shampoo is not tested on animals?" are just a few of the seemingly stupid questions. You can't incriminate yourself or anyone from answering them, right? Wrong. Questions as ridiculous as these get the conversations started, they provide

Be as rude as you can. These losers (on their petty little power trips) are protecting the very violence and suffering we have dedicated ourselves to destroying. These people work for an agency that terrorized Martin Luther King and the civil rights workers, beat union organizers, and killed an unknown number of "communists." Their job is not to protect America (as we all have seen they fail miserably at doing so) but to protect business interests at all costs. If it is not your style to be rude, make it your style. If they knock on your door and don't have a warrant tell them to "FUCK OFF." Not the classiest of things to say, but lets remember we are not dealing with classy individuals and have to speak a guttural primitive language they will understand.

NO ONE TALKS - EVERYONE WALKS

90% of all investigations are resolved based on interrogations and interviews. Speculation hurts other people. Saying things as innocuous as, "Anything is possible," when asked about whether other friends could have sent letters or went on protests has landed activists in front of grand juries. It is a cardinal activist sin to ever say the name of another to the FBI on any subject. Loose lips sink ships. Cliché yes, true – unfortunately. Just keep your mouth shut!

CHIRON diary of a direct action campaign

Q: What do you get when you take the First Amendment, stomp all over it, send the FBI to harass activists, sue them left and right, and mix it with endless animal cruelty and determined, savvy activists that will not be stopped?

A: A direct action campaign.

That's right ladies and (a)gents. The California campaign against HLS customer Chiron has been one of direct action, more direct action, and only direct action. After lawsuits from Marsh, Stephens, and HLS; after being corralled into barricades, ticketed for using megaphones, and forced to "show ID or I'll arrest you;" after being arrested for leafleting and indicted for chanting, activists nationwide have learned that going through "proper" channels often means harassment, lawsuits, and bogus charges. You can only push aboveground activists so far before the underground rises up. There is no clearer example of this than the Chiron campaign in California.

Let us extend our thanks to all the plaintiffs, PI's, prosecutors, and police that have spurred one of the most effective campaigns to date.

October 3 – Chiron Director Edward Penhoet and VP Martin Forrest have $25,000 charged on their credit cards. New appliances, computer equipment, and Celine Dion tickets are overnighted to their homes!

September 5, August 31 & 27 – Email sieges fill the inboxes of Chiron directors and executives.

August 28 – Two bombs explode outside Chiron headquarters. The "Revolutionary Cells" of the "Animal Liberation Brigade" take credit for the blasts and enter the HLS picture.

August 23 – Chiron employee Linda Short has "Puppy Killer" and "Drop HLS" written in etching fluid on her brand new car.

August 18 – Activists cover Chiron VP Martin Forrest's front step and fill his mailbox with rotten fruit.

August 16 – Activists erect a cemetery in the front yard of Chiron executive William Green.

August 11 – Chiron employees Linda Short and Edward Penhoet have their homes painted with "Puppy Killer", and "Chiron out of HLS" slogans, feces smeared on her doors, and personal alarms left blaring in the wee hours of the night.

August 5 – Activists hold a 3:30AM concert complete with megaphone serenades and window percussion.

July 25 – Activists pound on Linda Short's door at 2:30AM and wake her with megaphones and late night phone calls.

June 18 – 5:30AM demo wakes Chiron Chairman of the Board Sean Lance.

June 11 – Chiron employees leak internal numbers, info on how to bypass Chiron security, and company gossip to activists...who promptly report it around the world!

May 30 – Activists plaster Chiron employee neighborhoods with HLS info and home numbers and addresses. Tons of calls pour in overnight and employees change their numbers by morning!

WELCOME CHIRON INVESTORS:
participants at a chiron investors meeting are greeted by kevlar helmets, bomb sniffing dogs and automatic weapons.
